

George Simons the Coupl^r. offered his Sister Elizth Simons, wife of the said George Simons a Deed for Conveyance of the pretended Tract of Land called Gadhill to Signe, after the Coupl^r. had Read some part thereof to her, and this Depou^t. Saith he doth verily believe George Simons his Sisters husband was not there, But this Depou^t. Saith he doth well Remouber his Sister Elizth Simons Answered the Coupl^r. words to the Effect following (viz^t) that she know of no right she had to Gadhill, for that it belonged to her Brother Thomas, To which the Coupl^r. Answered it was no matter for that he would buy her Right, and his Sister after other such like discourses said something is better then nothing and thereupon this Depou^t. desired his Sister Elizth Simons not to Signe the Deed, for that they came Coniuringly & Underhandedly to cheat her, and putt Tricks on her, & earnestly desired her to Carry to know Certainly whether there was a Title or not, or she had any Right or not, and this Depou^t. Saith he did call the Coupl^r. and those with him many bad names, which caused the Coupl^r. to Desire Mr. New to take him this Depou^t. aside & to take him in discourse; soon after the Deed was signed, the Coupl^r. said to the said Samuel New the Elder you may Lett him know for the Deed is signed, and after that the Coupl^r. Read the Title of her father, as he said and thereupon (to the Post of his Remembrance) his Sister fell a Crying and abused them all sadly, and said they underhandedly cheated her, and abused her & further Saith not.
