

BALTIMORE, November 25th, 1864.

COL. WOOLLEY:

Dear Sir:—This will be handed you by Mary Dixon, colored, who has a son bound here, and wishes to get him released, and wishes you to put her in the way to get it done; I know her, she is free, and belongs in Dorchester county, Maryland.

Very respectfully,

Your ob't servant,

H. J. CARROLL.

Endorsed—“States Mary Dixon, colored, has a son bound out that she wishes to get released.”

BALTIMORE, December 6th, 1864.

I went to the Eastern Shore after my little boy some two weeks since and found him at the house of my former master, John Mackfuley. I informed Mr. Mackfuley that I had come for my son, he told me that I could not have him.

Mr. Mackfuley had previously told my husband that he would not give up the boy until he found out positively that he could not hold him.

GEN. WALLACE,

Sir:—James Coker is made free by the Constitution of Maryland, I do not know what to do with him. I have lost three women and a boy and have no means to do anything for
