

By enactment, Title IV. Chapter I. Section 6, in order that the interests of each County may be fully understood and guarded, the County Judge is declared a member of the State Board of Education for counsel and vote on all questions connected with the investment and disbursement of these County School Funds.

CHAPTER III. PAGE 21.

SECTION 8. The additional charge of five per cent. is made to meet, as far as practicable, the cost of ordering and forwarding text-books, to pay salary of clerk and such incidental expenses as will necessarily connect with so large a business.

SEC. 9. This is a most important feature. Its design is to save time and money; to avoid those litigations which are the fruitful source of personal bitterness, and result in serious detriment to the Schools.

The opinion of the States which have tested this question is unanimous in its favor, and the General Assembly is urged to examine most closely into its bearing upon the harmony and success of our School operations, before authorizing any course which may bring the Schools into Court.

SEC. 10. We have in view the formation of an Educational Museum containing in well arranged order, the popular text-books in every department of instruction. Also such School apparatus now in use, and which may be invented for the purposes of object teaching or the illustration of science. This Museum will be attractive and instructive to Teachers and to all interested in Education.

It will show the progress that from year to year is being made in modes of teaching, a progress as rapid and diversified as that which marks the machinery for the culture of the soil or for subduing the elements.

The Library will place within the reach of practical Educators sources of valuable information. It will exhibit the plans adopted not only in America but also in Europe. It
