Answer. Yes; I suppose many regretted it coming down. Question. Did not those persons who regretted its suppression, take a very lively interest in the flag which was subsequently put up?

Answer. Some of them did.

Question. Did those parties cheer?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Were there any persons gathered around the flag or Ady's Hotel, whom you recognized as disloyal men, and sympathisers withe the rebels?

Answer. Some belonged to the Horse Guards; I do not know whether they were rebels or not.

Question. Were there any on Mr. Ady's porch? Answer. I did not recognize any at that time.

Question. The first time that flag was put up, did they express any approbation or disapprobation at the raising of the flag?

Answer. Approbation.

Question. Did you hear any cheering for Jeff Davis and the Southern Confederacy, at the time of the first flag-raising? Answer. No.

Question. Where were you standing when the first flag went up?

Answer. Near the pole.

Question. Did that flag go up without any difficulty, or did it catch?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question. Was your attention chiefly directed towards the flag, or to the crowd at Ady's?

Answer. At that time it was directed towards the flag. Question. How long a time intervened between the two?

Answer. I cannot say.

Question. You are certain in was the second raising when this difficulty at Ady's occurred?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Were you there most of the weeks succeeding the 19th of April?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Did you see the Horse Guards often during that time?

Answer. Yes.

Listing in the three sories of the the Question. Were they on duty?

Answer. On Sunday I saw them picketing the road near Cockeysville.

Question. How near to the troops at Cockeysville was their most advanced picket?

Answer. About four (400) or five (500) hundred yards. Question. How frequently were the pickets stationed along the road?

Answer. I cannot just remember that, I know there was