Question. Did I understand you to say that that is not a copy of your Extra?

Answer. I think it is: I know part of it is.

Question. You say that is not your type—that it does not look like your type?

Answer. I know it is not my type.

Question. Can you tell your type?

Answer. I don't know whether I could tell all my type.

Question. Can you identify your type when shown to you?

Answer. Pretty generally.

Question. Have you any original of that extra?

Answer. No: I did not keep any file of it; I never published it in my paper.

Question. Look at that and see if this is your type?

(The paper marked "Exhibit G" was here shown to witness.)

"EXHIBIT G."

BALTIMORE COUNTY AMERICAN

EXTRA.

TOWSONTOWN, MARYLAND,

Saturday evening, April 20, 1861.

Civil war is in our midst? A riot has occurred between soldiers from the North and the citizens of Baltimore, and unarmed men have fallen beneath the musket shots of soldiers from another State. We have stood long by the Union Flag—we have contended thus far beneath its folds, but now we must coincide with Governor Hicks and Mayor Brown, as well as with the sentiment of the people of the entire State in saying that Northern troops shall not pass unharmed through the State of Maryland, for the purpose of subjugating the South. Northern troops are now, it is said, marching to Washington, intending to force themselves through Maryland, and we can but say to our people, respond to the call issued by the Governor, and defend your State.

It is said that Government troops who came as far as the Gunpowder, on the Philadelphia Rail Road, were prevented from proceeding by the bridge being destroyed, and that they are now marching on foot towards Baltimore.

The Baltimore County Horse Guards, of this place, has been ordered out, and manfully are they responding. They
