The General Assembly defines aquaculture as an agricultural activity. [Aquaculture] "AQUACULTURE" includes the commercial rearing of finfish, shellfish, and aquatic plants for sale, trade, barter, or shipment. It is the intent of the General Assembly to create an advisory committee to promote the development of an aquaculture industry in this State. The Maryland Department of Agriculture is the lead agency for promoting, coordinating, and marketing aquaculture and aquaculture products. The Department of Natural Resources is responsible for enforcement of laws, regulations, and rules. The University of Maryland is the lead agency for research in aquaculture production.
