

Q. Did you see any of your countrymen driven from the polls?

A. No, sir. There was a cooper went with me to vote; there was no fighting, nor threatening, nor intimidating, nor crowding; it was quite a fair and open election while I was there.

Q. What ticket did you vote?

A. I voted the American ticket.

By Mr. Goldsborough—Had it a stripe?

A. I didn't take much notice of it, and I cannot say whether it was striped or not; I generally send my little son for my ticket.

Mr. Alexander—I won't affirm it, but I don't think there were any striped tickets used in November last.

By Mr. Freaner—Q. Did you ever vote the Democratic ticket?

A. Several times.

Q. When did you change?

A. Well, whenever I see a man up that suits me particularly, I change.

Q. Were you ever interrupted in your business by any person?

A. Never.

By Mr. Alexander—Q. What did you do with your ticket when you got it from your son?

A. I wrapped my ticket up in my pocket, and did not show it to anybody; nobody asked me to show my ticket; if I had to show my ticket to anybody, I would not have voted.

Mr. Freaner. No doubt it was pretty generally known how he intended to vote.
