

"No, I don't care anything about voting." There was a captain there who was asked if he was not going to vote, and he said "no, I don't care about voting now." He said, "I am going out on the Hill," but when he came back, he did come up and vote.

Q. What ticket did he vote?

A. I presume he voted the Reform ticket. A gentleman of the Reform party came up and asked for a ticket; the ticket was handed out to him, and he laid it down, and struck out a single name, and when he attempted to do that, some person said, "Don't do that," and his remark was, "I am a free man; I am going to vote my own sentiments," and voted the Reform ticket with the exception of a single name.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am a regalia maker.

Q. In counting these tickets, do you recollect seeing the name of Mr. Purnell or Mr. Gaither printed on any of them?

A. I do not. The tickets were counted by the other judges. I had not the opportunity of examining them except in a few instances where I was referred to.

Q. How would this election compare with others which you have seen for quietness or the reverse?

A. I have been a voter for the last eleven years in that ward, and I have known of no quieter election than it was, and I have heard the same opinion from every one who witnessed it. At times there was a little capering around the window, but I did not see a fight nor a blow struck the whole day.

Mr. Morgan—If any disturbance had occurred, would you have seen it?

A. It might have occurred, but in all instances when there is a disturbance immediately around the window, it causes a commotion in the crowd, and the judges are very apt to see or hear that there is something going on outside—I have no knowledge of any disturbance taken place after the disturbance in the morning.

Q. At what hour did that disturbance take place?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I think it was about fifteen minutes before the polls opened.

Mr. Stockbridge—Were you in any other part of the building beside that in which the polls were held?

A. I was not, saving the room in which the judges were.

Mr. Hagner—Do you belong to any of the clubs?

A. I do not; the first club that was raised in the city of Baltimore was called the Swan Club. I met with them twice, but I have never seen them from that day to this.
