

Ques.—Did he tell you he would have voted?

Ans.—No, he did not.

Ques.—Did you see his ticket?

Ans.—I did not see it opened, but it was well known that he never voted any other but the Democratic ticket. He is known at this present time to be a Democrat, and is never known to have voted any other ticket.

Ques.—You have heard him talk of his Democratic principles?

Ans.—Well, sir, he is a man of not a great many words.

Ques.—Who also was rejected?

Ans.—Mr. William Stevens, who offered his vote, was challenged by Mr. Taylor, and he took the oath and voted. There was no objection if a man took the oath. Mr. Wm. Caustin, Mr. Samuel Caustin and myself went out there with the intention of voting, but did not vote upon the grounds that we did not consider Mr. Taylor had any authority to challenge, we being in one district and he in another. I asked the officer if Mr. Taylor had a right to act as he was doing. The officer replied very politely, that he presumed he had. Neither Samuel Caustin, William Caustin, nor I offered to vote.

Ques.—How would you three have voted?

Ans.—As for myself, I would have voted the Democratic ticket. I heard the others express themselves as being disappointed, and regretting that they had not voted in the morning.

Ques.—For whom?

Ans.—They did not say; they thought that I knew that too well.

Question by Mr. Randall.—The only one, then, whom you knew would have voted the Democratic ticket was yourself?

Ans.—I was not challenged. I knew that I would be, and therefore did not offer to vote.

Ques.—You did not ask these other men how they would have voted?

Ans.—No, sir; I did not think it necessary.

DIRECT EXAMINATION RESUMED.

Ques.—Did you know of any one else that you recognized as members of the Democratic party, who would have voted the Democratic ticket, and did not?
