So the house sustained the previous question.

On motion of Mr. Duke, said bill was read for the information of the house.

Mr. Giles called for the reading by the clerk, of the 14th Article of the amended Constitution of Maryland;

Mr. Ford rose to order and objected;

The Speaker decided that it would be read by the permission of the house—and it was read accordingly.

The question was then put, shall the said bill pass?

Resolved in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Powder, the yeas and nays were ordered, and appeared as follows:—
