A YOUNG HERO.—A correspondent of the New York Times thus describes Lieut. Cushing, who blew up the Albemarle.—

"The most astonishing part of this narrative is, that the hero of it is a youth of only twenty-two years of age, with a record already summed up, of which many grey beards would be proud. When introduced to him, I could scarcely reconcile the fact that the unassuming young man before me, with his frank open countenance and long hair thrown wildly back behind his ears, looking like some student just escaped from college for a little frolic, was the man whose name is already and so justly before the public. Apart from the glory which such episodes throw around the character of our navy, this destruction of the rebel ram Albemarle, is a really important affair. It has for months past, kept employed in watching, and at bay, at least five or six other vessels, which will now be released for any other kind of duty."

A young fellow once offered to kiss a Quakeress.

"Friend," said she, "thee must not do it." "Oh, by Jove! but I must," said the youth. "Well, friend, as thou hast sworn, thee may do it, but thee must not make a practice of it."
