

M'INTOSH, JR., DIES SUDDENLY AT AGE OF 62

Former State Senator
And Social Leader Dies

Served Three Terms As President Of Maryland Senate

Heart Disease Fatal To Attorney At His York
Road Home

David Gregg McIntosh, Jr., for three terms President of the Maryland Senate and one-time candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, died suddenly yesterday afternoon of heart disease at his home, Dumbarton House, on the York road just beyond the city line.

He was in his sixty-third year. He had been ill for the greater part of the winter and was at the Union Memorial Hospital for a rest during March. Notwithstanding his illness, Mr. McIntosh had continued the practice of law and had not been confined to bed.

For many years Mr. McIntosh had been identified with what is known as the "Valley Crowd" in Baltimore county Democratic politics.

Member Of Hunting Set

He was a member of the hunting set and until comparatively recently rode to the hounds of the Elkridge-Harford Hunt Club. He was a member of the Bachelors' Cotillon and the Elkridge Kennels Clubs. In point of service, he was the oldest vestryman of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church of Towson, a position he held for forty years.

Mr. McIntosh was born at Towson on July 1, 1877. He was the son of David Gregg McIntosh, who went to Towson from Darlington, S. C., soon after the Civil War and established himself in the practice of law. His mother was the former Virginia J. Pegram, of Richmond.

Receives A. B. Degree

Mr. McIntosh was educated in the schools of Towson, at Major Hall's School in Baltimore and Marston's School for Boys. Graduating from Marston's in 1895, he entered the Johns Hopkins University. Three years later he received his A. B. degree with a classmate whose domination of the Democratic party he challenged thirty-two years later, the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie.

He entered the University of Maryland Law School and became a law clerk as soon as he left the Johns Hopkins University. In 1900 he became a member of the bar, and, for sixteen years, until his death, was associated in the practice of law with his father. Later he formed a partnership with James F. Thrift, a member of the Baltimore bar.

Elected To House

Elected To House

Mr. McIntosh entered actively into Democratic politics in Baltimore county and the State in 1913, when he was elected as a member of the House of Delegates. He twice was reelected to the House and, in the special war session in June, 1917, served as Speaker.

In 1919 Baltimore county sent him to Annapolis as a Senator and reelected him in 1923, 1926 and 1930. He was President of the Senate at the 1924, 1927 and 1929 sessions.

It was in 1929, when Governor Ritchie began maneuvering toward a fourth-term nomination, that Mr. McIntosh announced that he was a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination and, by citing the Bill of Rights' condemnation of long continuance in office, indicated his disapproval of a fourth term for the Governor.

Withdraws From Race

He remained in the race from November 1, 1929, until April 4, 1930, when he announced that seeing that organized support on which he had relied was not forthcoming, he was withdrawing from the contest.

Upon his withdrawal, Mr. McIntosh again was elected Senator from Baltimore county, but, as the result of his challenge to the Ritchie regime, was deprived of further posts of importance in the Legislature. He was not a candidate in 1934, but was put forward that year by political friends as a likely candidate for the United States Senate.

Author Of Rigid Rules

Among the legislators he was noted for his dignified, erect bearing and well-groomed shock of cotton-white hair. He was author, during his tenure of the chair in the Senate, of rigid rules of decorum, which that body now has incorporated in its regulations. It was during his administration of the Senate that smoking was banned in the chamber.

During his legislative career he was identified with numerous proposals relating to fox-hunting and a foe of legislation placing a bounty on foxes. In Baltimore and several other counties, through his interest, the fox is protected as a game animal.

Former Bar Group Head

Mr. McIntosh was a past president of the Baltimore County Bar Association, a member of the Maryland State Bar Association and the Towson Lodge of Elks.

Funeral arrangements had not been made last night.

Mr. McIntosh is survived by his wife, Mrs. Charlotte Rieman McIntosh; two sons, J. Rieman and David G. McIntosh 3d; a daughter, Mrs. Charles T. Williams, Jr.; a sister, Mrs. William Walter Morton, of Richmond, and a granddaughter.
