Gov. Glendening called Scrivener "hard-working and conscientious."

Judge Joins Circuit Court

■ Montgomery County District Court Judge Louise G. Scrivener has been appointed to fill the Circuit Court seat left vacant by the retirement of Chief Judge William M. Cave.

Gov. Parris N. Glendening (D) announced the appointment yesterday, saying Scrivener "has a proven reputation as a hard-working and conscientious jurist."

Scrivener, 44, was appointed to the District Court in 1992. She graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1972 and received her law degree from Catholic University School of Law in 1975.

The judge has received the highest rating awarded by the Women's Bar Association of Maryland and was voted "highly qualified" by the state and Montgomery County bar associations.
