

Maryland Items.

The real estate of the late W. G. Yingling, in Frederick county, was disposed of at public sale last week as follows: 121 acres of land to E. T. Yingling, for $45 25 per acre; 114 acres to same, for $37 per acre; 245 acres to Wm. T. J. Yingling, for $29 per acre; 34-acre wood lot to John D. Yingling, for $3 60 per acre; 32-acre wood lot to same, for $5 75, and a 17-acre wood lot to Edward Nichols, for $7 05 per acre. The total sum realized was between $12,000 and $20,000.

A meeting is to be held in Cambridge, Md., the first Tuesday in January, to consider the practicability and utility of connecting the Choptank via Cambridge creek, with the Blackwater river. Col. James Wallace, Wm. Wilson Byrne, Clement Sullivan and Joseph H. Johnson are to address the meeting.

The Calvert Journal says: "Demijohns are scarce just now in Calvert. They all went on a tour to Baltimore this week, but are expected to return brimful of 'refreshment drops' in a few days, when they will be heartily welcomed by their friends."

The Elk Mills Company of Cecil county has effected the sale of the well-known mills called Lovell's factory to Mr. Painter, a New York capitalist, for $100,000.

Edward Haines and H. H. Doyckinck, of Rising Sun, Md., each placed recently 1,500 California salmon in streams near their residences.

The residence of Frederick Gortner, in Garrett county, known as the old "Swan House," was entirely destroyed by fire last week.

The grangers of Wicomico county have established a store on the co-operative plan in Salisbury.

The new National Bank at Cambridge, Md., opened its doors for business last Monday.

Mr. Poulson E. Hubbard, a well-known citizen of Caroline county, is dead.

Mr. John N. Davis, a leading citizen of Cecil county, died last Thursday.