GRAVE CHARGES MADE IN FIGHT ON BRYN MAWR

Dr. M. Carey Thomas Accused Of Determination To Dominate School.

OSTURING PRINCIPAL ALSO LAID TO HER

Parents' Meeting Told She Had Threatened To Destroy Institution.

Open charges that Dr. M. Carey Thomas, retired president of Bryn Mawr College and a member of the board of managers of Bryn Mawr School, had threatened to destroy the latter institution if her wishes were not carried out were made last night at a meeting of fathers of present and former pupils.

It also was stated that in case the property ceased to function, the property would revert to Miss Thomas under the terms of the will of Miss Mary Garrett.

The meeting, which was held at the Protestant Episcopal diocesan house, was called by Bishop John Gardner Murray to ask for expressions of regard and appreciation of the work done by Miss Edith Hamilton, who recently retired after 25 years of service as head mistress of the school.

Resignation Pending, It Is Alleged.

Early in the evening the declaration was made that the resignation had been forced by Dr. Thomas. As an attempt to reach Dr. Thomas over the long-distance telephone last night failed, he was contacted by the chairman of the meeting at her home in Bryn Mawr, Pa., it was said that she had retired and could not be reached.

In calling the meeting Bishop Murray said he was actuated by a feeling of the deepest gratitude to Miss Hamilton for the work she had done as head mistress of the school and declared that his four daughters owed her as much as they did to their home training.

Miss Hamilton has received a serious blow in the house of her friends," he declared. "If she has any friends here she should take more forcible action than giving her a box of candy with a note on it.

Bishop Murray attempted to forestall vigorous action by insisting that he would not serve as chairman of an investigation meeting.

"Come Only in Pay Tribute.

"When I asked you gentlemen to come here tonight," he said, "I did so with no other intention than to pay a tribute to Miss Hamilton. I am at present in the处于 from her pocket."
dinner speaker who pulls from his pocket the draft of the speech he is surprised at being-called upon to make. Certain resolutions have been prepared by Mr. Sidney Hall, at whose suggestion I called this meeting and then they can be discussed. Afterward we can consider a more substantial form of testimonial."

Almost before the Bishop had finished speaking, Sewell S. Watts, of the banking firm of Baker, Watts & Co., was on his feet.

"During the last 72 hours things have moved so fast and so furiously that we whose daughters are students at the school are filled with a sense of fear and alarm concerning the future of Bryn Mawr," he said. "The situation affects every teacher and the smallest child who goes there. I am credibly informed that the very existence of the school is imperiled."

"Things of the most personal nature have been injected into the controversy and we cannot shut our eyes to the condition that exists at the school. I understand Bishop Murray's feeling in the matter, but I also feel that there should be mutual consultation even if the Bishop is not present."

Seems Much To Be Regretted.

Mr. Hall then arose with his resolutions and prefaced the reading of them by saying he had no knowledge of the present situation.

"During the last 60 hours, however, there has been much said and done that is sure to be greatly regretted," he continued, "in this city. Every word of this resolution comes from my heart."

Mr. Hall then read the resolution, which began, "Whereas, because of ill health"—and continued at some length voicing in terms of "deep appreciation" the gratitude of the patrons of the school for the work done by Miss Hamilton and the ideals which had characterized it.

Dr. John H. Latane, dean of Johns Hopkins University, then inquired if ill health were the real cause of Miss Hamilton's resignation. Dr. Harry Fielding Reid, at whose home Miss Hamilton spends much of her time, said she had not been well for a long time.

"Early in the winter she went before the board and offered to retire or to continue her work if she were allowed a longer vacation during the summer," said Dr. Reid. "Soon afterward she received a letter from Miss Thomas informing her that the board had voted unanimously to accept her resignation."

Watts Starts Explosion.

Mr. Watts then interjected, "Just to throw the fat into the fire," he said. "I understand that during the last 48 hours Miss Hamilton has been subjected by Miss Thomas to the most harrowing ordeal. Miss Thomas has even threatened to close Bryn Mawr."

School if Miss Hamilton does not follow her directions. Is that true, Dr. Reid?

"That is true," Dr. Reid replied. As a result of this discussion Mr. Ingle said that Miss Hamilton was 'on account of ill health,' and that she would be strictly from the resolution, and this was carried.

Dr. K. E. Fisher then attempted to come to the rescue of Miss Garret's ability, she brought Bryn Mawr School into existence, and we cannot suppose that she intends to do anything which will change its character. Miss Garret's will specify that unless certain standards are maintained the school will lose the property in which it is located and the property will revert.

Answer Raises Laughter. "Revert to whom?" shot back Mr. Ingle.

"To Miss Thomas," replied Mr. Fisher amid a roar of laughter. When the laugh had subsided Mr. Fisher said that any suggestion that Miss Thomas was seeking to destroy the school for selfish motives was impossible and that he was surprised at the implication.

Mr. Ingle took issue with Mr. Fisher in regard to the disinterestedness of the board. He enumerated the personnel: Dr. Thomas, Miss Kelly, her secretary, and Dr. Thomas' sister, Miss M. Morris Carew—"three with one voice," he designated them. Dr. Florence B. Bowditch and two members of the alumni, who, he added unanimously adopted resolutions regarding Miss Hamilton and had instructed their representatives on the board to read them at the board meeting.

"These resolutions were never presented and the inference of is that you could not expect these two young girls to cope with a woman like Dr. Thomas. The board, therefore, is not a representative body, but an organization dominated by a single mind."

Pailed To Receive Resolutions. Mr. Hall came to the defense of the two alumni members, Miss Amy Steiner and Miss Anna P. Bowditch, and declared that they had failed to appreciate the severity of the resolution from the secretary of the committee and consequently had gone to the board meeting.

substantial memorial to Miss Hamilton is to be presented with the resolution. A copy of the resolution is also to be sent to Miss Thomas.

Angry Interview Alleged. Affairs between Miss Thomas and Miss Hamilton moved rapidly over the week-end. Miss Thomas presented herself on Sunday at the residence of Dr. Reid, 600 Cathedral street, where Miss Hamilton is staying, and the two at once went into conference. During the interview, it is said, Miss Thomas became exceedingly angry and, according to Dr. Reid, shouted so that she could be heard all over the house. She charged that Miss Hamilton had violated the ideals of Miss Garret and herself and declared that she had completely mismanaged the school! What Miss Hamilton said in reply is not known.

Miss Thomas is also said to have participated at a meeting of teachers yesterday and to have laid down the law in no uncertain fashion. A board meeting yesterday afternoon followed, at which Miss Mary Harris, whom, it is said, Miss Hamilton wished to become her successor as head mistress of the school, was voted down. The board appears to have no other candidate to offer and, after much discussion, it was decided to hand the matter over to the committee of teachers who are to run it until other arrangements are made. Miss Hamilton also resigned as a member of the board, thus completely severing her connection with the school.

All the teachers of the school are expected to meet again this afternoon and it was said by one of them last night that definite action would be taken at this meeting.
Bishop Murray then ruled all the discussion out of order and asked the board to act on his resolution. Mr. Ingle then moved that it be referred to a committee to revamp and “such protest” as the situation seemed to warrant.

“Such protest has the formality of an anathomy,” he said. “A 15-year-old girl could draw up a statement of honeyed words that would do her no good whatever.”

“Will it add to her peace of mind if we tag on a ‘cuss word’ for somebody else?” Mr. Park stated. Mr. Ingle withdrew his resolution, and the motion was carried. Mr. Ingle then suggested that 50 patrons of the school underwrite a fund of $10,000 for two years at least and turn the money over to the president to which people who had been impressed with her work might send their daughters.

He withdrew this motion also when Dr. Latane pointed out that the sum was entirely inadequate.

Dr. Reid then stated that it was time to quit.

In reply to a question concerning the attitude of the teachers of the school, Dr. Reid declared that all of them were ready to go. Mr. Watts then remarked that the present crisis in the school had been threatening several years.

“I was called in to go over the financial situation with Miss Hamilton,” he said. “The institution was then in serious straits and Miss Hamilton was under severe strain. All she knew was that each year yielded a deficit.

“I found that all bills were sent to Miss Thomas’s office at Bryn Mawr College in New York, and I appointed an auditor to go over the receipts collected here also. She went to Miss Thomas, who had reduced the indebtedness on the institution by a mortgage, which she held.

“I had the buildings at Preston and Catesby appraised by John B. Marshall & Sons and the land by William Marten. Altogether the appraisement amounted to about half a million dollars. The mortgage is for approximately $70,000, a very valuable mortgage and one that will be a great help to the institution.

“A new schedule of charges was then arranged, much against Miss Hamilton’s inclination, for she disliked to charge anything anyone anything for anything she disliked to charge, turning away any girl who desired to come to Bryn Mawr, but since then things have been looking up. The salaries of the teachers have been increased, and the former system of textbooks showed a profit of about $12,000.

Gives Miss Hamilton Credit.

“During the years which mean so much to the school there has been no policy set by any board or anyone else but Miss Hamilton.” Bishop Murray, in his opening remarks, that made the girls love her, and are we to stand by and see these women who have done so much for our girls publicly insulted? Shall we not come to the support of these women who have done so much for us? We owe the school and the community a stake and take care that this school regard to nobody.”

Upon motion of Dr. Reid, who then declared that the meeting was getting too late, the meeting adjourned.
