Mrs. N. W. Donaldson, of this section, visited relatives in Howard county, a few days since.

There will be services at Salem M. E. Church, in this locality, on Sunday, October 6th, 10 a. m.

EASTPORT.

Owing to the continued hot weather, there has been very little demand for oysters, and as a consequence there have been a great many bedded for future demands.

Business is brisk at the glass works, all hands making full time. Orders are plentiful, and busy times will probably continue until spring. The future outlook is very bright.

The ladies of the Baptist Church here will hold an oyster supper this evening at the church, to which the generous public are cordially invited. An excellent supper can be obtained for 25c. They deserve to be patronized.

Wright Smith Lynched.

Wright Smith, colored, who assaulted Mrs. James Morrison, wife of Capt. James Morrison, a white woman, on the night of Friday, September 2, at her home near Jones Station, in the third district, was taken from the jail here Wednesday morning at 2 o'clock, by a mob and shot to death.

At two o'clock the bell rang at the front jail door. Watchman Thomas J. Duvall went to the door, supposing an officer was there with a prisoner. He took down the inside iron bar, and as soon as he did the door was burst open and a half dozen revolvers were pointed at his head. Behind them were masked men, and to the rear of them more armed men. Without a word they forced the watchman to the second floor, and then they demanded the keys to the corridor, which he gave them. The door of the corridor swung open, and straight to the cell went the men. The cell door was thrown open and the prisoner ordered to come out. Neither the assailants or the doomed man had a word to say. By this time the lynchers, thirty in number, crowded the jail corridors, some in light white clothes and masks, and some without masks. Watchman Duvall says he could not make out any person individually, nor could he tell whether they were young or middle-aged men. The prisoner was compelled to go before the mob. He walked down the stairs to the front door and out. He neither offered resistance nor uttered a word until he reached the front steps on Calvert street.

There was some difficulty in getting through the door, and in the scuffle Smith got away and started to run, yelling "murder." The mob began firing and pursuing as he turned up Northwest street toward the City Cemetery. He ran into the vacant lot behind the new colored school building, when a lead from a shot gun entered the back of his head behind his right ear, blowing out the base of his brain. After the mob found that he was dead, they left as quietly as they had come.

It is supposed that the crowd was made up principally of Baltimoreans, as Capt. Morrison and his family reside in Baltimore in the old 17th ward.

Officers Basil and Brooks, of the city force, were nearest the jail, and heard the shots. They hastened to the scene of the shooting. It was all over when they reached the prostrate form of Smith. William Taylor, colored, saw the crowd come to the jail. They were in two squads—one of thirty and one of twelve men. He could not tell whether or not they were masked. They did not talk. All were on foot save one who was in a buggy.

Frank Matthews, on Clay street, saw the firing from his rear window. All he heard Smith say was "murder." From fifty to seventy-five shots were fired.

Warden Perry was asleep when the mob entered the jail and they did the work so quietly that the prisoner was gone when he got up.

Deputy Sheriff Burlingame had been locked in his room, and knew nothing of the mob. Watchman Duvall could tell the main points of the affair, but he was so shocked he was quite nervous in his account of the strange proceedings. At 4 A. M. Deputy Burlingame went to the home of State's Attorney Bushners and asked what to do with the body. The state's officer told him to take it to the jail where an inquest would be held.

Justice Brewer summoned a jury of inquest as follows: W. H. Gassaway, foreman; R. G. Chaney, Chas. A. DuBois, Thos. Basil, Weems Riddout, H. Ellinghausen, W. W. Morrison, W. O. Martin, W. H. Feldmeyer, Benj. Suit, Frank A. Munroe and John Anderson. The jury, after hearing some testimony, adjourned until Friday night.

Naval Academy.

The Naval Cadets reported on Friday evening for the opening of the Academy on Saturday. Some of the cadets received ten demerits for raising mustaches.
