

the secret Working of their avowed Enemies, and consider, if any good can be designed to them, by the present Fawning of these pretended Catholics, upon Men who can give them any Assistance in carrying on their Designs against us, and who have not been hardy enough to exasperate them, by doing their Duty to God and their Country. A little Time will shew what their Influence is: May it be an Occasion to prove us Protestants, to prove us Britons, by invigorating our Opposition to their pernicious Designs and Combinations.—Let us ward off the impending Danger.—We owe this to our King and Country, to Ourselves and Posterity.—Above all, it is a Debt we owe to GOD, to use all just Means of Defending those inestimable Civil and Religious Rights, which his Providence has preferred to us, unto this Day.

TUNIS, July 14.
LAST Month we sent to Sea four Gallies, carrying 12 Guns, 52 Swivel Guns, and 679 Men; but their Success is very inconsiderable, having taken only a Genoese Coral Bark, a Neapolitan Bark laden with Corn, and 2 Genoese Pirks. One of the latter, whose Crew amounted to 27, tho' deserted by her Companion (the Crew of which made their Escape in the Boat) fought our four Gallies, with only four Guns, a considerable Time, and did not strike till she had been five Times boarded. The Gallies belonging to this Place had upwards of eighty Men killed in the Engagement, and about 120 wounded. The Genoese lost only one Man; but the Turks were so exasperated by their obstinate Resistance, that they massacred two of the bravest, after they got Possession of the Vessel, and wounded ten others. The French Consul insists that the Vessel and Men be released, as having been taken within Sight of the Island of St. Margarete, contrary to the Treaty with the most Christian King; But his apprehended his Remonstrances will be without Effect, because a French Ship protected last Year the Crew of a Neapolitan Vessel taken by a Corsair of Tunis.

Rome, August 2. The Suspicion of the Reality of the Conversion of the King of Golo, one of the Philippine Islands, has proved well grounded; all he meant by embracing Christianity, was to procure the Assistance of the Spanish Troops in that Country, for some petty Conquest he had in his Eye, and when his turn was served, these Auxiliaries were to be massacred, and by this Increase of Power he intended to make himself absolute every where. His design being transpired, he has been deposed and confined till Orders arrive from Spain how he is further to be disposed of.

Naples, August 9. His Catholic Majesty expresses himself in the following Terms in his Letter to our Monarch concerning the Disgrace of M. de la Ensenada. I have honoured the Marquis de la Ensenada with my Confidence, and entrusted him with the principal Affairs of my Kingdom, in hopes that he would entirely apply himself to the promoting the Happiness of the Nation, and relieving my faithful Subjects. But the Duties of the Public having rather increased during his Ministry, and risen to the greatest Height, I was moved with the Hardships to which my People were reduced. Their Misery excited my Compassion, and I have withdrawn my Favour from a Minister who acted so contrary to my paternal Intention.

LONDON, August 7.

We hear that several Officers of the Customs, at one of the principal Ports in this Kingdom, have been lately dismissed from their Employments for Practices detrimental to the Revenue, in the Importation of Tobacco.

Letters from the Morea advise that on the 15 of June, about eight at Night, a violent Shock of an Earthquake was felt along that Coast, particularly near Lepanto, by which nine populous Villages were swallowed up, and a great Number of Persons, as well as Cattle lost.

They write from Cornwall, that the Smuggling-Trade flourishes in the North Part of that Country, more than was ever known in the Memory of Man, inasmuch that the French spirituous Liquors are so plenty as to be drank muzzled with Cyder, instead of small Beer; and that France and Guernsey have almost drained the Country of its Money (except the bad Halfpence, which the Smugglers complain the French won't take) for Brandy, Rum, Tea, and Tobacco, luxuries of Life which were never known to be more used than at this Juncture.

Sept. 14. Several Letters from St. Hyppolite, in the Diocese of Alais, advise, That a Protestant Minister who was found preaching in the Cevennes, was taken up and tried, and hanged the same Day. The Master of the House where he preached, and several other Persons, are also taken into Custody, and are now actually under Prosecution. [Such expect to be your Fate, O! ye American Protestants, if ever French Popish Bigots become your Masters.]

On Tuesday last was executed, at the Guildhall, an Inquiry of Damages, in an Action depending in the Court of King's Bench, between an eminent Merchant of this City, Plaintiff, and Mr. Harry Smith, Defendant, for taking the Plaintiff by the Nose; when the Jury, upon a full Hearing of the Matter, gave the Plaintiff a Fairing Damages.
