BOSTON, September 15.

The military Spirit greatly prevails in all Parts of this and the other New-England Governments:

As soon as Advice came from Major-General Johnfon, that a Reinforcement was needful, our People have been daily inlifting into the Service. And this Province alone will have upwards of Four Thousand Men in the Expedition to Crown-Point. ----We have the warmest Expectations of Success in that Undertaking; ---- Our Cause is just, and our Men inlist from Principle. --- We are not assamed to own our Dependence on the God of Armies, and we profess to go forth in his Strength.

The Defeat at the Southward, has not in the least abated the Courage of our Men: On the contrary, it has enkindled the Fire of Resentment. The Blood of our Fellow-Subjects at the Ohio, --the Blood of our dear Brethren upon our own Borders, inhumanly spilt from Time to Time, cry aloud,---too loud not to be distinctly heard.---And we cannot but hope that those brave Men who are gone and are going to Crown-Point, will be honoured by Providence, to humble the Pride of our haughty French Enemies; and be made the Instruments to deal all that Vengeance upon them, which their Perfidy and Cruelty deserve.

September 15. Thursday last were executed at Cambridge, pursuant to their Sentences, Mark and Phillis, two Negro Servants belonging to the late Capt. John Codman, of Charles Town, for poisoning their faid Master: They were both drawn from the Prison to the Place of Execution, attended by the greatest Number of Spectators ever known on fuch an Occasion, where the former was hanged by the Neck till dead, after which his Body was gibbetted; and the latter was burnt to Death.
