From the LONDON GAZETTE EXTRA
WHITE HALL, J

Relation of the Battle of Crevelt, gain'd by the Protestant Majesty's Army, commanded by the Prince of Orange, over the French Army, commanded by the Prince de Clermont, on the 11th of June, 1758.

AFTER his Highness's command, by the well judg'd order of the King's Army on the 12th of June, the Left Wing of the French wards the Convent of Campe, had Prince de Clermont to quit his boat on the 12th and 13th, thought proper to give a new Position by occupying the Heights common to Anthony's Mountains, having the Trench in Front, at two full Leagues Distance, the Right opposite to the Trench of Tonningsberg, in which 300 Grenadiers as an advanced Guard, with 12 Pieces of Cannon, which were more than sufficient to the extremity of our Wing against this Position was executed the 14th of June, about Five o'Clock in the Evening. Serene Highness was informed that the French Army was advancing in four Columns upon our Highness immediately ordered three Regiments of Foot, and the whole Army, in Order of Battle, a Quarter of Eight o'Clock, and saw distinctly, that at about two o'Clock from our Right Flank, a Column was coming over the Plain of Hulsting towards Crevelt.

Not knowing whether this Body was the whole Army, or whether it was a Detachment of it that was marching, Serene Highness halted till towards 10 o'Clock, when he received certain Intelligence that the French Army had marched towards Crevelt, and that Prince de Clermont had only 1000 Men, under the Command of General de Germain, in order to take Post at Crevelt. Upon this Information, his Highness ordered the Light Troops and Hussars to Kempen, and ordered the Army to march again. On the 16th he changed the Position of the Army, in Consequence of the March of the Corps of M. de St. Germain, and ordered the Right to the Village of Crevelt, and continued the Left on the Heights of Crevelt.

On the 17th his Highness went to Kempen, towards Kempen, the Enemy's Detachment at Crevelt, and at such a Distance from their Army, therefore, to be better informed of the Countenance this Corps would give, the Prince of Holstein, with ten Regiments of five Squadrons of Hussars, and 1000 Men of Sporcken Guards, and to march early in the Morning of the 17th towards Kempen. He further ordered General de Meunier to pass the Rhine at Dullbour, and to march towards Halberbourg's, and Hanau's, and the four Regiments of Bock's Dragoons, the Light Troops, and Skelter, and to advance the same Day towards Sporcken, where the French Army, had been ordered to march as long as the Enemy should be seen, received likewise Order to march next Day with five Battalions of Dragoons, and to leave only Major de Bock, with the two Battalions of Dragoons, at Burick, and that of
