A SPEECH concerning the Peace delivered in a certain Parliament Mr. PITT.

THE Treaty now in progress, perhaps, a Transaction of a Nature to the Interest and the Liberties of that ever was brought sembly. Gentlemen, upon one Side of said a great deal against what the Conditions, and others have supposed equal Warmth. For my own Part I leave to say, that I partly differ, with both; and, let me say farther, before you seems to have hit the which the true Interest of Great-Britain, in which, Sir, it ever must lie whatever, a free, and an independent. Could I conceive a continental circumstance as to be totally to our Interest, I am very sure my hope over the way could not oppose it, tho' perhaps he might oppose it, with more Efficacy, than I am afraid I may not have the the Interest of Great-Britain, that have.

In my Opinion, Sir, the Interest whatever Light we view it, comprise System of public Liberty in Europe, that, Sir, is affected, whenever give me Leave to say, and I appeal for the Truth of what I advance of England is endangered. This, that has ever been laid down and followed by all the wife and public-spirited Ministers we have ever had, and shall be given up under this Family.

The Increase or Diminution of Imports, the Articles upon our Books, and the several Matters of Papers that now lie before us, are points of the highest Consequence. I may say to the Existence, of it for Gentlemen to confine all their Cares, all their Reasonings, to the cleaning the Dial-Plate, and Movements, of a Watch, without the main Spring is ready to snap, the preservation of the public Liberty which can be effected only by the Protestant Religion, gives me Leave to say, that I am very sure my hope over the way could not oppose it, tho' perhaps he might oppose it, with more Efficacy, than I am afraid I may not have the the Interest of Great-Britain, that have.

I am as far as any Gentleman in Europe, from justifying all the contentions we have run into for these 20 Years, will any Man lay his Hand upon me, that if Great-Britain, during had been an unconcerned Spectator of Europe, that France would have been more than in a dispute with her, the Empire, even with all the Ruin which the late war upon her Marine, notwithstanding the loss of her Trade has sustained in the ending all the providential Checks received in Germany, and the Money raised on the Continent, you see, what even now making at Sea; Efforts for future Times to believe, unless (event) their future Successes shall be credible.
