Marshal Broglie's Relation of the Engagement and 16th of July, at the Village of Filinghausen.

MARSHAL Broglie having, on the Morning of the 15th, marched with three Columns, to take Possession of the Village of Filinghausen. The Marshal began his March with all the three Columns, to take Possession of the Village of Filinghausen. The Marshal began his March with all the three Columns, to take Possession of the Village of Filinghausen. The Marshal began his March with all the three Columns, to take Possession of the Village of Filinghausen.

The Column of the Left, consisting of the Viceroy's Regiment, the Grenadiers, and the Corps of the French, and the Royal Grenadiers, commanded by the Marquis de Stainville, was destined to proceed along the Rivulet Aelt, and seize the Castle of Nagel; and accordingly, the Castle was occupied, and Prisoners taken, who made small Resistance.

The Column of the Right, of which Baron Cluvelin was to march by Ultrop, and advancing thence, make an Attack on that Village. The Marshal executed with Success. Baron Cluvelin took Possession of the Village after an obstinate Defence of the Enemy's Troops that were in it beyond the before their Camp, and took Post in it, and at which they had thrown up there. The whole Troops which Lord Granby commanded, made attempts to dislodge us, but without Effect. He was in all Probability, have succeeded, if Marshal Broglie had not considerably reinforced the six Battalions of Royal Deux Ponts, with the two Battalions of the Hunters of Auvergne and Poitou, and Volunteers, who had made the first Attack. de Gurchy, who commanded the Division on advanced very seasonably to support St. Victor's with the Grenadiers and Hunters of the Brigade; and this Brigade commanded by the Marquis de la Rochechouart, as also the Marquis de Duras, and the Count de Vaux, led up the Champagne, Auvergne, and Poitou.

In this Position (in which we then contented ourselves on the Defensive, and of which the Notice to the Prince de Soubise at eleven a waited to see what Step the Enemy would take.

At Day-Break the Cannonading began again, with great Vivacity till five o'Clock, when it suddenly ceased. The Enemy appeared at that Time with Thoughts of attacking us; they seemed to be in doubt of what was doing on their Right, to determine they should take. They did not remain in peace; about Seven, we saw Columns filing off from the Center, and the Right of their Army.

The Fire of the Small Arms, which kept up all the Morning on our Right, was now augmented, the Fire of the Cannon was redoubled after we perceived Dispositions made, and Columns to attack us, with a Force much superior to our own. The Marshal being informed of certain Incidents, he had no other Part to take, but to return to Filinghausen. He immediately ordered the Troop of the Village of Filinghausen. This Movement in the Presence of Forces so much superior was executed in the best Order. Only the Regiment of the Rouge, which was the most exposed, and had suffered considerably, was overtaken, and partly the Enemy, who took many Prisoners, and so the Regiment of the Rouge was almost entirely destroyed. The Horses that drew its Cannon were also lost. There were likewise some of their Light Troops came as far as the Village, which is very much surrounded with marshy hollow Ways, five Pieces of Cannon, Horses were killed, or which were dismounted in the Retreat.

The Marshal himself formed the Rear, with the Grenadiers of France, and the Royal Grenadiers of the Counts de Stainville and the Chevalier de Modena, who led them in Order and Firmness. We retired in Order several Lines; we halted several Times, and my in so much Awe, that they did not venture beyond the Hedges of the Village of Filinghausen. Some of their Light Troops came as far as the Village, which is very much surrounded with marshy hollow Ways, five Pieces of Cannon, Horses were killed, or which were dismounted in the Retreat.
