"It hath been remarked here, with some Surprize, that the Russian Minister keeps up as great an Intimacy with the Austrian Minister, as if the two Courts were on the best Terms; on the other Hand the Hanoverian and Prussian Ministers have privately signified their Displeasure that the Russian Minister is to reserved to them.

" The Swedish Minister is soon to present the Dyet of the Empire a Declaration of his Court touching the Peace concluded with the King of It is perceived that France has suggested this Step with a View to justify the Part she hath been forced to act; and to infinuate that she can no longer take Part in the Army of the Empire. As to the rest, this will enable the opposite Party to give a new Interpretation to the Syllem of the Empire's Guaranty, under Favour of which the French Troops entered the Empire at the Beginning of this War: This System hath indeed changed, for the Court of France now confiders the Hanoverian Army as an Army acting for the Interest of England. On the other Hand, the French Troops that invaded the King of Prussia's Dominions in the Country of Cleves, did it rather for the Account of the Court of Vienna, than for the Account of France, though the French had a Share in the Contributions that were raised; but this was in Consequence of an Agreement between the two Courts, which, it is foreseen, will occasion such Disputes as the Court of Vienna will not be sond

Sugust 2. The Intemperance of his Cherokee Mejetty and his Chiefs, and the selfish Views of the Proprie ors of our Public Gardens, in to plentifully Treating them with Strong Liquors, give Occasion to the Considerate, sincerely to with them fafely shipped off for their own Country. At Vauxhall, on Thursday last, it is supposed that not less than Ten Thousand Persons crowded this ther to obtain a Sight of these Indians; at the same Time, a Songstress of the Grove attempted the Honour of traversing the Walks with the Swarchy Monarch dangling on her Arm; but the Press was fo great, as to oblige him to retire, with his Chief (and many Ladies of the Town) into the Orchestra; where they entertained themselves and the gaping Multitude, by sounding the Keys of the Organ, scraping upon the Srings of a Violin, clapping their Hands in Return for the Claps of Applause bestowed upon them, and swallowing, by Wholesale, Bumpers of Frontiniac. Between Two and Three in the Morning, their Cherokeethips began to think of departing, and, being duly supported, made shift to reach their Coach for that Purpose. The Chief, who was in the best Plight, stepped in first, with his Friend, but the Garment of his Majesty unluckily falling foul of a Gentleman's Sword Hilt, in the Crowd, a fort of Scuffle mistakenly ensued, the Sword by some Accident was drawn, and broke, and the Indian's Hands in a pretty bloody Condition, were expofed to the Spectators, with much feeming Remonstrance and Complaint. He then threw himself in a Fit of Sullenness or Intoxication, or both, on the Ground, and obstinately remained there for a considerable Time. Force however effected what Persuasion could not, for he was Neck and Heels listed in, and laid along the Bottom of the Coach. Soon after, his Legs, which had obstructed the Shutting the Door, being carefully packed up with the Rest, the Coachman. by driving away, put an End to this wretched Scene of British Curiosity and Savage Debauchery.

August 24. There is a strong Probability that we shall hear of a Peace within a Week or Two. There was all the Reason in the World to fuspect the Spaniards had something more than Linen and Woollen about them; accordingly by a Search, which was made without any Rudeness or Infult, no inconsiderable Sum was found very artfully concealed in several Parts of their Apparel -There was a Priest of a very mortified Afpect, and who, in Accents no less mortified, begged he might be permitted to take with him two or three of his devotional Books; for about all other Things he was very indifferent. No Difficulty was made of this; but the Curiofity of a petty Officer prompting him to look into one of the Books, he found it very weighty, on which strik-ing a Knise into the Cover, it pierced only the Leather, which being ripped off, behold a bright Exhibition of Quadruples, or Four Pistole Pieces, inlaid in every side of the Pasteboard! The Book, stripped of its Cover, was given to the Priest, with this Compliment, That about the Cover he was, to be sure, very indifferent, and now the Book would be lighter Carriage to him. The Cover is kept as Curiofity."

The King of Prussia, moved by the extreme Necessity of his Subjects in Pomerania, has caused Corn to be bought at Dantzick to the Value of 100 000 Crowns for their Relief. But notwithstanding this bountiful Gift of the King, the Distress of this Province exceeds all Description, as appears by a Letter lately received from an eminent Clergyman at Stettin, dated July 15, who on his Journey to Colberg, found upwards of feven Villages laid in Ashes, and others so ruined, that no living Creature was to be seen in them, but Skeletons of People perished with Hunger, and gnawed by wild Beasts. In two Villages near Colberg, which he passed through, the Inhabitants surrounded his Coach, begging for a Bit of Bread, assuring him they had not feen a Piece of Bread for five

A Tradesman in the City, having taken a Wise, and living upon very ill Terms with her, they agreed to part, and the Wise retired into the Country, where she was introduced as a Wisow, to be Housekeeper to a Person of Fortune. The Gentleman soon after conceived a great liking for her, would fain have married her; but being informed that a Husband stood in the Way, they (for, it jeems, fee conceived a Liking to bim too) agreed to take each other's Word. The Gentleman in a few Years died, leaving his Fortune to his beloved Housekeeper; who surviving him bet a short Time, it descended to a Daughter, the Fruit of their Embraces. The Girl then falling into the Direction of a Friend, who was a Stranger to the Mother's Marriage, and being brought up to Town to finish her Education, the Tradesman by Accident became acquainted with her, wis fmitten, paid his Address, and married her: Some Months after, having Occasion to look over her Papers, to his great Surprize he found thereferent Letters in his Wife's Hand-writing, which he knew he had restored her at their Separation. this introduced an Inquiry, the Upshot of which was, that he found he was married to his Daughter in Law; which so afflicted him, that he took to his Bed, and is fince dead. The Daughter how. ever, being the innocent, though unfortunateln. thrument of his Unhappiness, he took Care to remember in his Will; and the Addition this made to her Fortune, as well as a handsome Jointure fettied upon her at first, she is now become one of the wealthiest Widows about this Metropolis.
