

the must be the Betty and Sally, Captain Rocher, in Honduras, for this Place. Her Companion, Anchors, and Quarter-Rails, were gone, which I supposed, were swept away with the Boom, which also gone. It is more than probable, that the crew had not long before been taken off by some Vek, as the was so stripped, and her Boat lay on the deck, stove to Pieces, and, in the Cabin, was a Turtle, it appeared to have been very lately dressed. Capt. Gleton kept her in Tow till Night; and, in the mean time, stripped her of her Anchors, standing Rigging, which he has brought in with him. He imagines she sunk soon after he cut her loose, as they perceived Water rose on her fast while they were on board.
