To the Printer of the PUBLICK ADVERTISER.

SIR, I have carefully attended to the Dispute between Mr. Wilkes and his Antagonists concerning the Office of Sheriff...

Mr. Wilkes. It is my Resolution, Mr. Oliver, to serve the Office of Sheriff with you next Year...

Mr. Oliver. Sir, I will not serve it with you, because our political Aims are very different...

Mr. Wilkes. My Common-Council have persuaded me on the 11th of April in the Evening, to serve the Office of Sheriff...

Mr. Horne. Sir, as this Question so materially affects the Freeholders of Middlesex, you should surely have known their Sentiments before you had published your Resolution...

Mr. Wilkes. Sir, I never had a Thought about it till I had taken the Sense of the County of Middlesex, and of my respectable Friends...

Mr. Horne. Sir, the Meeting of the Antiquarians is not a Meeting of the Freeholders; nor had the Freeholders any Notice of your Intention...

Mr. Wilkes. Sir, I was prevented by the Dog Star. Mr. Horne. The Dog Star! why last Summer was the coolest we have had in England many Years...

Mr. Horne. But the French Servants. Will the Dog-Star justify your squandering the generous Subscriptions of Englishmen on a Set of French Servants?

Mr. Wilkes. Sir, they ought to be supported by all good Patriots; for they had the Honour of serving an Englishman in Exile.

Mr. Horne. Exile! You mean when you fled like a Coward from the Laws of your Country. But, Sir, it is not possible to furnish you with Money sufficient to support all the French who may have had the Honour to serve you in Exile...

Mr. Wilkes. Sir, if the Dog-Star does not satisfy you, I shall give you no other Answer.

Mr. Horne. But the French Servants. Will the Dog-Star justify your squandering the generous Subscriptions of Englishmen on a Set of French Servants?

Mr. Wilkes. Sir, they ought to be supported by all good Patriots; for they had the Honour of serving an Englishman in Exile.
