

To the PRIN

Mr. FINKNEY

FROM a
colone
the G
a more
any wh
public. You w
and perhaps aff
entertainment to
tion is but little
may be necessary
relation may be Bridge is built o
of Elizabeth riv
land on each si
from the river,
bridge, where a
not improperly
tiredly by water
by caueways.
the farther, or
his fort, in such
the caueway on
him and us, wit
on this side of t
some of which bridge) by the
in the others, a
stationed a gua
withdrawn befor
to the fire of th
way to our cam
by their cannon
length about on
hither extremity
the breast-work
the length of fo
our main body
Norfolk in shi
the country bac
to be built here
Norfolk by wat
nature of the p
our situation, a 9th instant, aft
guns, and som
enemy's fort, w
was but little
soon afterwards
to their arms
made the prop
the mean time
the remaining
piles of shingles
work. Our me
to some confu
capt. Furdyce,
great resolution
as they approach
brought across
the island, faci
briskly at the s
commanded in
serve their fire
of fifty yards,
ble execution.
keep up their
glory, and wa
ingly told them
forward, he te
His wounds w
that of an hero
progress of the
ed over the
dreadfully gall
only, the guar
thers, upon th
nistry, had b 24th regiment,
caueway, and
crossing the b
regulars, after
gain rallied b
continued to p
that col. Wood
breast-work w
now directed t
cannon better
the musquetry
men marched.
Stevens, of th
the last to stan
activity and sp
enemy fled int
he d. pietts, w
up with nails.
flight, but col
troops from un
gaining of the
work might b
the total defea
some of the en
fear of being f
told them wou
live. Thirty
hands, and th
Through the
soldier behav
The conduct
leace. Before