LONDON, April 15.
WE have set at liberty the foreigners that had been imprisoned during the late reign, for dealing in rough diamonds, and have also restored to them their effects which had been seized.

Though we do not at present talk much of war, nevertheless the queen has lately made a grand promotion in four regiments.
Gen. May 7. Letters from Spain announce that the Court has received certain intelligence that the great fleet commanded by Don Cevallos was arrived at Great Britain, and had taken on its passage an English frigate, laden with gold, silver, and other contraband goods; and that it had also intercepted three other ships of the same nation, that were carrying warlike stores to Brazil.
Berlin, May 13. His Prussian majesty is perfectly recovered from his late fit of the gout, and attends the military exercises of the season as usual. On Friday last his majesty dined at Charlottenburg, and returned to Berlin in the evening. On Saturday the seven regiments of infantry in garrison here passed the special review; and on Sunday the corps of gen. d'Armes and gen. Zieten's hussars. The great reviews are fixed for the 30th, and the two following days.

LONDON, May 9.
On Monday the 8th ult. the Aurora's cargo of tobacco (a prize brought into Liverpool) divided into about 80 lots, was sold by auction in one hour and a half, for upwards of 30,000.
The fact respecting Lord Percy is, in substance, as follows. After the affair at Trenton, general Howe wrote to lord Percy for 2,500 men. Lord Percy did not immediately comply with this order; but returned for answer, that the enemy were collecting a large force near Providence, of which circumstance the supposed gen. Howe was unacquainted; that he thought it his duty to represent this matter, and to add, that he apprehended it would be dangerous to the service in that part, to send away so large a corps.

Gen. Howe replied, that lord Percy knew the consequence of disobedience of orders, and would certainly be tried by a court-martial, and would certainly be broke if he (gen. Howe) was inclined to show his lordship all the indulgence that his services deserved; at the same time he insisted upon his order being punctually obeyed. The troops were sent.

Lord Percy wrote an account of the whole affair, and sent it (by the last vessels from Rhode-Island) to his father, the duke of Northumberland; at the same time beseeching his grace, to lay him with all humility at his majesty's feet, and to solicit his immediate recall. The duke complied with his son's request. The king was greatly surprised. Lord George Germaine was sent for. His lordship was surprised, also, not having had the least information of such difference.

It is not known what has been done; but it is probable that gen. Robertson, or gen. Patton, who will set out this day to embark for New-York, will carry the decision.
May 10. The appearance of the American privateers in the Channel has so affected insurance, that scarce any good names can be got to a policy, almost at any price.
This morning 40 per cent insurance was offered on the Dutch mail that sailed on Saturday last from Harwich for Helvoetsluys, no certain advice having yet been received of her arrival.

Letters from Amsterdam mention, that a large American privateer had put in there to repair, and was almost ready to sail on a cruise; that she had taken 7 or 8 prizes off Bermuda in November last.
When the speaker of the house of commons arrived at the bar of the house of peers on Wednesday previous to the civil list bill receiving the royal assent, he made the following speech.

Most gracious sovereign,
The bill which it is now my duty to present to your majesty, is intitled, "An act for the better support of his majesty's household, and of the honour and dignity of the crown of Great-Britain;" to which your commons humbly beg your royal assent.

By this bill, Sir, and the respectful circumstances which preceded and accompanied it, your commons have given the fullest and clearest proof of their zeal and affection for your majesty; for in a time of public distress, full of difficulty and danger, your commons labouring under burthens almost too heavy to be borne, your faithful commons published all other business, and with as much dispatch as the nature of their proceedings would admit, have not only granted to your majesty a large present supply, but also a very great additional revenue, great beyond example, great beyond your majesty's highest expectations.
But all this, Sir, they have done in a well grounded confidence, that you will apply wisely, what they have granted liberally; and feeling, what every good subject must feel, with the greatest satisfaction, that under the direction of your majesty, without the assistance and grandeur of the sovereign will reflect dignity and honour upon his people.
May 11. The following message was on Wednesday received by the house of commons from his majesty:
"Gentlemen, relying on the zeal of his faithful commons, I think it necessary to desire that they will make provision for the extraordinary expenses of the American rebellion, that may arise in the course of the coming campaign, and for the gold sent to the army."

The supplies granted in the course of the present year, including the intended vote of credit, and 800,000 navy bills, to be paid off, will amount to fourteen millions and a half. If to this we add four millions and a half interest, paid to public creditors, and 600,000 per annum revenue of civil list, we shall find the whole of the burdens borne by the people of this country, for the year 1777, amount to little short of twenty millions sterling.

Yesterday orders were sent to Cork, to get ready provisions there for twenty sail of transports for New-York, which they are to expect by the 30th instant. This morning advice was received from Dunkirk, that capt. Kelly was very unhappy in his present situation; that the French had thrown many obstacles in his way, and he had so many punctures to go through before his ship could be delivered up, that he is apprehensive he will at last be disappointed. From their present behaviour he much doubts whether they ever intended he should have the ship again. However, by the assistance of an attorney, he hopes to be able to go through regularly all the forms required; and thereby it will soon be determined, whether the French were sincere in their promises. The same advice say, that capt. Cunningham and crew, though at present they are confined in prison at the request of our ambassador at Paris, yet they live there in great plenty, daily receiving favours from the French inhabitants at that port, and are hourly reinforced by some of the principal people; from which it is imagined their stay in prison will be very short.

All accounts from America agree, that there has been a greater mortality, through the flux and other disorders, among the foot-guards, than in any other corps.
So great is the scarcity of men for land as well as sea service, that all the invalids who are capable of serving abroad are to be picked out for that purpose without delay.

A ship from Virginia, with 30 hogheads of tobacco, bound to France, is taken by the crew, and carried into Whitehaven.
May 20. They write from Hanover, that the troops of that electorate, which usually consist of 16,000 men, are reduced by the late stragglers, and by sickness, to 11,000, and that orders have been given for recruiting them; but this is done with great difficulty, as all the German powers are employed in the same business.
The 6th ult. there was the greatest tempest all over Western Prussia and Pomerania that ever was remembered, which has done infinite damage, and destroyed several houses, churches, &c.

Lord Canning, it is confidently affirmed, has lately transmitted accounts of a very alarming nature to some of the principal persons in administration, respecting the intrigues of two northern courts with the leading members of a certain republic, and their frequent conferences with the French ambassador.
The last accounts from Paris mention an order having been sent to Orlon and Bret for immediately arming all the small ships of war, and for disarming eight sail of the line that were lately put in commission at the last-mentioned port.

May 21. We are assured from very good authority, the true reason of the Boder-ship of war coming expeditions from the West-Indies, was, to inform government that admiral Gayton had intercepted two or three letters from the governor of St. Domingo to the American congress, in which were contained promises to furnish them with whatever arms and ammunition they might want.
The secret treaty between the emperor, the king of Prussia, and the king of Sweden, is certainly concluded. The particulars are not all known as yet, but their plan is to oppose the empire of Russia in her progress.
The French officers who were confined on board the guardship at the Nore, have been released through the intercession of the French ambassador, on condition of immediately returning to France; and never more setting foot in America during the present war.

The Mercet, late the Earl of Errol, a large American vessel from Virginia, with 300 hogheads of tobacco, and 1000 slaves on board, bound to France, was taken by eight of the ship's company, after they had been out 17 days from the coast, owing to some bad usage they had met with from the captain, whom they feared, and have brought the ship into Whitehaven, in order to sell her cargo, which is valued at 10,000.
We can, from undoubted authority, assure the public, that the Earl of Errol's proposals to go down to the mouth of the river, on the 10th of the day following, if his health will permit him, in order to make an important motion relative to America.

Extract of a letter from Gibraltar, May 1, 1777.
Yesterday a schooner coming in from Ladis, with money on board (about 1000 dollars) wine, and other articles for the garrison, was boarded by a party of the British on the 1st of May, and taken on board the schooner, the boat from our fleet to retake her. She was in a state of decay, and as to be obliged to run ashore on the coast of Spain, without crew or provisions. A party of twelve men, armed with their guns, and commanded by the master of the ship, landed on the shore, and secured the vessel. They were returned by our sailors, who boarded the vessel and took the money. The Spanish sailors then were ordered to be sent to the hospital, and the vessel was without doing any damage. On a signal made by the commodore they returned, and brought with them the money. It remains to be seen whether the vessel, in any satisfaction will be demanded for an English subject, who was killed by the Spaniards, on their first boarding her.

They write from Madeira, that a rebel privateer, called the Little John, is taken, after a severe conflict, by an English ship of war of inferior force, and carried into that port to repair her damage, before she can be sent to England. The commander of the privateer, who was formerly an officer in the English navy, and five of his men, through the action, whom he could not keep in their quarters.

By an express arrived here last night, from Manchester, in the state of Vermont, which he left on Tuesday the 11th instant, we learn, that the enemy were then in possession of and fortifying Castle Town, on the Hampshire front, and about 2000 of the enemy, who were formerly an officer in the English navy, and five of his men, through the action, whom he could not keep in their quarters.

By some deserters from Rhode-Island we learn, that the capture of gen. Prescott threw the enemy into great confusion. After covering a little from their panic, parties were dispatched to every quarter of the island, in search of their general; but finding him gone, they were obliged to console themselves in bestowing curses and imprecations on the rebels. The command of the troops at Rhode-Island devolved on gen. Smith.
Capt. Benjamin Pearce, in the privateer United States, belonging to Warren, in company with a New-England privateer, has taken a ship from the West-Indies bound to London, having on board 450 hogheads of sugar, 300 deerkins, 200 raw hides, 6000 white oak staves, &c. The prize is arrived in a safe port.

PROVIDENCE July 19.
Saturday evening last a flag of truce came up the river from Newport with baggage, &c. for gen. Prescott. An officer, who came in the flag, strongly solicited for leave to come up, and to have an interview with the general, which was not granted. The baggage, &c. was received, and next day the flag returned to Newport.

P. I. S. H. E. L. L. July 21.
Extract of a letter from Major's creek, July 26.
We have just had a brush with the enemy at Fort Edward, in which Lieut. Van Veghten was most gallantly butchered and scalped. Two sergeants and two privates were likewise killed and scalped, one of the latter had both his hands cut off. They took a young woman, Jancy McCree, by name, out of a house at Fort Edward, carried her about half a mile into the bushes, and there killed and scalped her in cold blood. They have killed and scalped another woman near the same place.
Last Tuesday two men were taken up and interrogated in their errand to gen. Howe. They, being both Germans, were recommended to one Freleigh, their countryman, a French boy, to direct them the road. They, unfortunately, made a mistake by calling on a whig of the same name, who heard their enquiries and found out their errand, thinking it rather unsafe to let them pass, without a further examination into their real business, sent them for that purpose, under convoy to the Commissioners at Poughkeepsie.

Last Monday was hanged at Fort Montgomery, one of lord Howe's recruiting officers.
Last week another of the same gentlemen was hanged at Pecks-Kill.

KINGSTON (New-York) July 21.
We hear that upon the news of the evacuation of Ticonderoga, our troops and militia came in from all quarters in such numbers, that there were soon after at Fort Edward and the posts near it, an army of above 20,000 men, what it is hoped may in their turn drive gen. Burgoyne out of the country faster than he came, and may also properly check and chastise those Indians, and worse savages, the Tories that joined them, who on the news of our quitting Ticonderoga, began to discover a hostile disposition towards us, and that they were only restrained by fear from acting as open enemies.

It is also to be feared that some villainous designs of the enemy, respecting the safety of their cause, who on the news of our quitting Ticonderoga, began to discover a hostile disposition towards us, and that they were only restrained by fear from acting as open enemies.
