Extra of a letter from West-Point, Oct. 9, 1779.

Capt. M. is now at breakfast in gen. Greene's narquee: he is immediately from New-York. He informs us that a report is in the city, that count d'Estaing has captured all the British troops at the southward, and taken all their shipping and baggage. The people are in great consternation in the city, and are under fearful apprehensions, that the count will shortly be on that coast. They are fortifying with all possible expedition every advantageous place in and about the city, and have eleven vessels ready to sink in the channel at the Hook. Every possible exertion is making on board their shipping, in case of an attack. In short, the whole city is one scene of confusion and fear.

ANNAPOLIS, October 22.

Extra of a letter from an officer of distinction in the American army, dated New-Windsor, October 9, 1779.

"Our prospects are sanguine, and every preparation and disposition are making to co-operate with count d'Estaing, should he arrive on the coast of New-York, which may be expected, should events have turned out favourable in Carolina.

"A captain and other persons made their escape from New-York on the 6th instant, who inform, that the surrender of the British fleet and army to general Lincoln was announced there, and occasioned very long faces. They refused to surrender to the French."

WHEREAS the late Joseph Milburn Simms, late of Charles county, deceased, did by deed, about the year of our Lord 1744, for a valuable consideration, then in hand paid, bargain and sell unto the late Edward Goodrick, late of the same county, deceased, and his heirs, in fee simple, seventy-five acres of land, called Lyne's Delight, who was immediately put in and enjoyed the quiet possession of the same till his death; which after descended to the subscriber, as his heir at law, who hath ever since, and now has, peaceable and quiet possession of the same: but the said lands, by the neglect of the parties, were never properly acknowledged according to law, though the said Joseph Milburn Simms desired it should be on his death-bed, for the benefit of the lawful heirs of the said Edward Goodrick. In consequence of such omission, the subscriber, on coming to the possession of the said lands, applied by letter to Joseph Simmes, the lawful heir of the said Joseph Milburn Simmes, then in France, who sent over a proper deed and power annexed, attended with necessary affidavits, taken before the right honourable William Beckford, Esq; then lord-mayor of the city of London, under the great seal of that city, which were brought over and delivered to the subscriber by captain John Montgomery and James Campbell, who soon after failed, before making the proper affidavit the laws of this province in such cases require, as the subscriber is since informed.

I therefore give this public notice, that I intend to petition our general assembly, at their next session, for their interposition and authority to establish and perpetuate my right and title to the said land and premises.
