PHILADELPHIA, July 7.

Extract of a letter from Carlisle, June 28.

"A gentleman lately returned from Kentucky, reports, that a severe conflict took place near Lexington, between some of the inhabitants of that settlement and a number of Indians; and that there were sixteen whites and fourteen Indians killed during the engagement, and a number wounded. Of the provocation or what nation the Indians were we have not yet learned. He also says, that on his departure from that country, he met with men that confirmed to him, they belonged to a party of four, who came up the river to hunt, and that they proceeded accordingly, leaving the other two the care of the canoe and some necessaries; that they had not gone far before they heard the discharge of fire arms, which prompted them to return to their companions, who, to their great surprize they found killed and scalped; on this they set off by a tedious and difficult route, to escape falling into the hands of the savages, as they seem determined on barbarity.

"On Sunday last arrived here from the western country, Schodush, a chief of the Wyandots, and half brother to the king of that nation; he is well known for his humanity in protecting several of our people from the malignity of the savages, and is the greatest speaker in their councils; also the widow of the late celebrated White-Eyes, king of the Delaware; they are on their way to New York to talk with congress. Mrs. White-Eyes intends paying a visit to her son, who is a student of Princeton college these six or seven years past.

"They were accompanied by an interpreter, captain Drolleyer, a Canadian, who relates that he left Detroit about the middle of May, which was garrisoned by seventy privates of the British; and that there was not any hostile appearances in that quarter. Some of the officers informed him they expected to be called away shortly, as matters were in a train of accommodation between congress and their court."

SAVANNAH, June 22.

On Monday last, the 19th of June, died at his seat near Savannah, Nathaniel Greene, Esq; late major-general in the army of the United States; and on Tuesday morning his remains were brought to town to be interred. The melancholy account of his death was made known by the discharge of minute guns from Fort Wayne; the shipping in the harbour had their colours half-masted; the shops and stores in town were shut; and every class of citizens, suspending their ordinary occupations, united in giving testimonies of the deepest sorrow.

The several military corps of the town, and a great part of the militia of Chatham county attended the funeral.

General Greene left behind him a wife and five children; the eldest of whom is about eleven years of age. The loss of such a man, to such a family, must be truly afflicting!

"Thy darts, O death! that fly promiscuous round,
In such a victim many others wound."

Immediately after the interment of the general the members of the Cincinnati retired to the coffee-house and came to the following resolution:

On motion, That as a token of the high respect and veneration in which this society hold the memory of their late illustrious brother, major general Greene, deceased, George Washington Greene, his eldest son, be admitted a member of this society, to take his seat on his arriving at the age of eighteen years.

Resolved therefore, unanimously, That he be admitted a member of the Cincinnati, and that he may take his seat in the society on his arriving at the age of eighteen: that this resolve be published in the Georgia Gazette, and that the secretary transmit a copy of the same to the several state societies, and to the guardian of the said George Washington Greene.
