. CHURCHMAN returns his cordial thanks to all those who so liberally furnished him during the late war with materials and other encouragement relating to his map of the peninsula between Chesapeake and Delaware bays, including the faid bays, the fhores adjacent, the maratime parts of West-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and all the Delaware state; and he flatters himself (although it was performed under many disadvantages) that this small specimen of his first publication in the line of his profession will operate in the public mind, in favour of the present undertaking.

The following is an extract from the report published in the journal of the house of representatives of the Congress of the United States of America, for 1789, page 21 22. MONDAY, APRIL 20.

Mr. Tucker reported from the committee to whom was referred the petition of John Churchman, agreed so a report thereupon which he delivered in at the clerk's table, where the lame was twice read and de-

The first clause in the words following, to wit: That the committee have conferred with Mr. Churchman, and find that he has made many calculations, which tend to establish his position, that there are or two magnetic points which give direction to the neede die : that upon this doctrine he has endeavoured to as ascertain, from a given latitude, and a given variatise having applied his principles to many instances in "Cooke's voyages, has found the refult to correspond se with confiderable accuracy with the real facts, as far as they could be determined by the reckoning of the thip; that the object to which Mr. Churchman's a labours are directed, is confessedly of very high importance, and his ideas on the subject appear to be is ingenious: that with a view of applying them to w practice, he has contrived a man and a globe, whereso by to shew the angles which are made by the inter se section of the real and the magnetic meridians in different parts of the earth: that he is also engaged i e constructing tables for determining the longitude a so fea upon magnetic principles: That the committee are of opinion that such efforts deserve encourage or ment, and that a law should pass to secure to Mr. " Churchman, for a term of years, the exclusive pecu-" niary emolument to be derived from the publication of these several inventions," was again read, and on the question being put thereupop, agreed to by the house.-On motion-Ordered, That a bill or bills be brought in, making a general provision for securing to authors and inventors the exclusive right of spective writings and discoveries.
