ANN NAPOLIS, April 8.

Port-Tobacco, April 5, 1790. Died, on the second instant, at his seat on Patowack river, in Charles county, in the forty-fifth yearge, the honourable Robert Hanson Harri-N, Elquire, chief judge of the general court of the te of Maryland.

The transcendent merit of this great and excellent a need not the aid of panegyric-in civil and miliy life his conduct was uniformly fuch as will render memory dear to every good cutizen .-- While he ved the United States in the late war, his exertions. the high and confidential office he held, were fireas and unremitted—and the ability, the integrity, the affiduity which he displayed in the administraof justice may, perhaps, be equalied, they never be exceeded.

It may be added, with justice, that no man was eminently diffinguished by the possession or every

These qualifications make his death a calamity to public, and an irreparable loss to his amiable and oniolate family. Lament, O Maryland! thy loss deplore; v virtuous Harrison is now no more! nd you, who steady fortitude admire; nd you, who's bolom feels fair Virtue's fire; nd you, to whom each focial merit's dear, Prop o'er these lines a tributary tear; or each lov'd attribute his foul pussess'd, nd now in Heaven enjoys eternal rest."

On Friday the 26th of March, 1790, between hours of two and three o'clock, departed this life, the 56th year of his age, Mr. Thomas How RIDre, merchant in Port-Tebacco. He was eminentdistinguished for all the social virtues: an affecate and tender husband and parent, a most kind fler, a most merciful creditor, and a polite and inlable observer of all the laws of hospitality. Such ues must make his memory dear, as long as any furvive who were intimately acquainted with In him the neighbouring poor hath lost a friend.

Oft those who live in trouble, pain, and care, lave hop'd th' embrace of Death and wish'd him nd still when near! His dart have wish'd to shun, tho' by this a feat in Heaven is won. ot so with him: resign'd he met his fate, nd hop'd existence in an happier state. O Death!—to most who live, the greatest dread, hou 'rt still a friend to all the virtuous dead."
