One of the plans laid before the legislature of the United States, by M. D. L. Morel, for civilizing the Indians, is said to b the encouraging whites to intermarry with them. This it is well known, was the former policy among the French when they held Canada, and operated so powerfully in attaching the Indian tribes to that nation, that they could at all times command them, to the prejudice of the English. Hence too, it is thought, originated the filial thyle of affection in use among the savages to the French monarch, whom they always termed their father, whereas it was by dint of great presents only that they could be brought to call the king of England their brother.

Two frigates sailed from the port of Brest last fall, to make a thorough research for the frigates Boussole and Astrolabe, who sailed on discovery in August 1785, under the command of M. de Peyrouse; and of which no intelligence has been received since their leaving Botany Bay on the 10th of March, 1783. This however, is not their sole object; a voyage of discovery being included in their plan, for which purpose they took on board, by order of the king, a number of artists so qualified and provided, as to render this voyage, when finished, interesting to all nations. "They have also (says the Leyden paper) been well furnished with such articles of trade, and such useful implements for presents, as will render their arrival a blessing, instead of a curse, to the barbarous nations they may visit. The voyage, it is expected may last three years."

An Irish house of eminence at Lisbon, writes, to a correspondent in Dublin, that an extraordinary council was held at Belem, in the presence of the queen, on the 13th of September, wherein the most intelligent members of the agricultural and commercial academies underwent an examination touching the expediency of extirpating a certain part of the vines, to make room for a greater quantity of corn. The refult is said to be a determination to let the vineyards remain on the old footing, and import, either from America or elsewhere, such supplies of grain as may be wanting, in aid of the native produce, wines being supposed to turn to better account, and without a proper quantity for the usual foreign demand, the great staple of European commerce with that kingdom would certainly be loft. The yearly average product of wine in the fix provinces of Portugal, is estimated at 140,000 hogsheads, of which Great Britain takes 45,000, Ireland 28, Denmark, and the other northern countries, 30,000; in all, 103,000 hogsheads, which bring a prodigious sum to the merchants and landholder, exclusive of the revenue paid to government, on the export. The remaining 37,000 hogsheads, are more than sussicient for the home consumption, as the country is small, and the natives remarkably temperate, both in eating and drinking.
