CONTINENTAL. A recent ANECDOTE.

Part of the Old American Company have, for two months past, played at the theatre in Lancaster, and it is but justice to Miss Smith's performance, to mention the following humorous anecdote-

The character of Jane Shore, in the tragedy of that name, was played by Miss Smith-An honest countryman, who by no means wants either sense or understanding, but who had never before seen a play performed, was very attentive in the gallery; and when Miss Smith appeared in the latter end of the tragedy, his feelings were so worked upon, that he shed tears, gave a loud figh, and was making his way down as fait as he could. Upon being asked what ailed him, he replied, " Let me alone, I am going to buy some cakes for that lady—Isn't it a pity that that woman should die with hunger? Let me go; I will indeed; I care not for the king's commands, or any body's." Had this honest soul not been prevented, he actually would have appeared on the stage, and added a new, but supersluous, character to the dramatis personæ of Jane
