New-York, 13th August, 1793. 2d year of the Republic.

Citizen GENET - minister plenipotentiary, from the French republic, to general WASHINGTON, prefident of the United States :--

INTRUSTED in this part of the world with the other motives foreign from the general weal, to im- tor of Greenbury Ridgely. nede me in what I conceived the line of my duty. My conduct has accordingly been marked with all the MARTHA Floward, Executrix. energy and frankness which ever characterize a true republican. To you, alone, through the secretary of Rate, have Leoniplained of the principles you have adopted, and remonstrated against decisions which have resulted therefrom. To you, alone, have I declared that the federal government, far from manifesting any regard for our generous conduct towards this country, for the new advantages which we were oftering to her commerce, or for the reiterated demon-Arations of our real and difinterested friendship, were facrificing our interests to those of our enemies, by their interpretation of the treaties which exist between as. To you have I represented, without reserve, that this conduct did not appear to correspond with the views of the people of America, with their desire to observe with fidelity their public engagements, or with their affectionate regard for the cause of liberty. upon which their very existence and prosperity depend. Cerrain decisions of your tribunals and verdicts of your juries, added to the sentiments of your fellowcitizens publicly expressed, might permit me without s crime to draw this inference.

Nevertheless, certain persons, actuated by views which time will develope, despairing to attack my principles, have descended to personal abuse, in hopes of withdrawing from me that esteem which the publie feel and avow for the representative of the French republic. They publish, with great warmth, that I have insulted you, and that I have threatened you with an appeal to the people, as if you would permit any one with impunity to treat you with difrespect, or as if the flightest hint of an appeal, which magistrate, deserving of his high office, should ardently desire, was to you the greatest offence I could of-

It is become necessary, Sir, to dissipate these dark calumnies by truth and publicity.- I dare, therefore, to expect from your candour and probity an explicit. declaration, that "I have never intimated to you an intention of appealing to the people; that it is not true that a difference in political fentiments has ever betrayed me to forget what was due to your character, or to the exalted reputation you had acquired by humbling a tyrant against whom you fought in the cause of liberty."

A publication of your answer will be the only reply, which shall be given to those party-men, who never fail to confound the individual with affairs of state, which they too often make use of as a pretext for their zeal, and a reason for daitardly appearing under anony mous fignatures.

As to myself, I have always openly declared what I thought, and figned what I had written; and if others have supposed they could advance my views, by newspaper publications and paragraphs, they are much deceived-A good cause needs no advocate-Time and truth will make it triumph, in spite of its implacable enemies and the present cold indifference of some who were its ancient friends.

I have the honour, &c.

MR. JEFFERSON'S ANSWER. Philadelphia, August 16, 1793.

The president of the United States has received the letter, which you addressed to him from New-York, on the 13th instant, and I am desired to observe to you, that it is not the established course, for the diplomatic characters, refiding here, to have any direct correspondence with him-The secretary of state is the organ through which their communications should
