FRANCE. NATIONAL CONVENTION. TUESDAY, July 2.

General CUSTINE to the National Convention.

ce Cambray, July 2. "I announce to you with pleasure, that the troops of the republic have been attacked in various advanced their enterprise, and retreated very much hurt: we have lost little. The communication of Liste with Douay by Pont a Marc has been preserved. Pontarache has been attacked, as well as the abbey of Flins; but at every post, the enemy had no advantage; they were forced to retreat after a severe conflict, and without having made us lose ground, in spite of their great superiority of men and artillery. Under the reign of liberty, if we can obtain a military organization which can promise us a happy discipline, the distinctive characteristics of the military of a flourishing republic, our fuccess will be ensured, and soon kings and their vile courtiers will be forced to renounce their insolent pretentions, of giving laws to a nation, which has taught all people to know their rights and their powers. Believe, citizen president, in my entire devotion to the interests of the republic.

(Signed) CUSTINE." Custine, in the posteript of another letter, containing a refutation of the calumnies inserted against him in many journals, thus expresses himself:-We are informed from England of the affival of 12,000 Russians by sea from Petersburgh: they are (as we learn) this moment at Quievram. This sudden appearance completes the coalition of the tyrants of Europe, but the ferocious foldiers come from the north will not aftonish the brave republicans, who know how to destroy them, if they cannot make them retreat. Our success is certain; for the French, swayed by the love of liberty, ought to triumph over all their enemies, if the choice of a war minister is not guided by intrigues. The work of the constitution which you have finished, will inspire despair among our enemies; soon we shall no longer fear that the republic was but a dream, and France will behold the happiest of governments raised on a permanent, basis, the triumphant tree of liberty erected with

Captain Stone arrived since our last, from Ostend, which he left the 7th of July .- He confirms the accounts by former arrivals from Europe, of the dull movements of the combined armies-who had not, nor was it prohable they would make the least impresfion unfavourable to the cause of France and of liber-A few days before captain Stone failed, all the Dutch troops who were encamped about fifteen miles from Offend, fled into the town panie ftruck, on an alarm that the troops of the republic were marching against them, who are in great force near that place -this circumstance will give an idea of the imprelfrom which the French foldie's make upon their enemies.—The in ablumts of Otend were under fearful apprehentions of the French attacking it—which is confidered as a very probable event, as the English have great quantities of hay and other stores, and a

WHILST Galbaud used every means in his power posts, but the French soldiers have repulsed, with to seduce and deceive the men on Board the Jupitergreat loss the Janissaries of the united despots at Pont whilst, in open abuse and violation of the respectable a Marc. The action was very brifk; the enemy ar- titles of republican and patriot, he haughtily declared tived with the confidence of certain victory; after a that " he was firmly resolved to embark for France, in long and brilk action, they were obliged to abandon order to his jultification before the national convention"—this man employed the most base means to render the forces of the republic useless and inessectual; thereby to accelerate and accomplish the designs of our enemics.-He has meditated, in concert with other men, behind the mask of republicanism, the project of causing the French squadron to return to the islands, armed with fire and sword-that is to say, to return thither once more, with the fixed view of making the troops of the republic the instruments of their private and particular vengeance; and to facrifice the remainder of those marines that escaped the disastrous conflagration at the Cape.

> Things being thus circumstanced, and while matters were secretly carrying on as above related, the papers of Galoaud were leized in the possession of one of his principal agents, at the house of Tangui, which unfolded a plan as abominable as it was ridiculous !--Finding himself thus discovered, and that he was not only about to be totally abandoned, but that of course he would be universally despised by the brave crews of the squadron, he thought fit to concert measures for his elcape.

> Galbaud accordingly undertook his flight, and fucceeded-he ignominiously imposed on those men, who fwore to guard him faithfully; that he would procure them an asylum and protection at Philadelphia; whilst at the fame time, he bent his course towards Canada,

It is well known how he has effected his escape from the hands of American justice; but it is not understood how this traitor audaciously boasted, previous to his escape, to the American and English tories or aristocrats, " that he never, from his heart, favoured the advancement of the French republic; and that his only object in wishing to return to St. Domingo, was, to enter that colony under the domination of royalty

This affair being duly deposed before the mayor of this city, as well as before a great many others no less respectable citizens, should prove to the respective crews of the republic, that the citizen Genet was not at all deceived, when, upon his arrival amongst them, he denounced Galbaud as the accomplice of the wretched Dumourier-And now, that all is indubitably discovered, the several crews of the squadron have but one part to take, in order to prove their civism; and that is, to make known all those who have betray ed their confidence, by inciting them to riot and infurrection against the constituted authorities-for fuch men can be no others than the agents of Galbaud; a fet of rascals unworthy to fight against the enemies of their country, I

> Sept. 11. Sunday morning last, between three and four o'clock, a very alarming fire broke out in the buildings back of Mr. Kennedy's house, in Second-street, between High and Chefnut-streets, which was soon communicated to Mr. Dobson's printing office and other buildings contiguous—The confined fituation of the fire rendered the exertions of the citizens unavailing. till great destruction of property had taken place-all the back buildings of Mr. Kennedy, and several others and their contents being entirely consumed. Mr. Dobson's office nearly in the same situation. The citizens displayed their usual spirit and alacrity on this occasion. The officers and men from the French frigate, La Precieuse, and the India ship La Ville de L'Orient, merit very particular acknowledgments for their intrepidity and essential services on this occasion -They brought their engines with them and by means of those, conveyed the water through smoke and flames to the very spot where the fire raged; Mr. Dobson is, peculiarly indebted to these intrepid sons of Neptune for the preservation of his dwelling houseas it was extremely difficult and entirely impossible in some directions to bring the large city engines in immediate contact with the fire.- Two perfors were killed at the time of the fire, by the sudden falling of a brick wall, and some others wounded. The loss of the sufferers, Mr. Kennedy in particular, is very great -and that of Mr. Dobson is heavy, as he had a very large amount in types, &c. exposed and destroyed.

The sufferers by the above fire, and others, who were in imminent danger, have publicly, and perfonally acknowledged their obligations to their fellowcitizens, and particularly to the French seamen, for their benevolent and spirited exertions whereby the fiames were arrefled in their course, and great property preferved.

The mayor has informed the citizens-That from the returns made to him, and which have been pretty accurate, the number of persons which have been taken off by the prevailing disorder do not exceed one hundred and forty from the first death which happened, to the second instant.

The mayor has also informed the citizens that the African Society have humanely agreed to furnish nurses for the fick-apply to Absalom Jones or William Gray, members of said society.

Captain Elijah Ely informs, that on his passage from Cape Sables to Boston, he saw on shore, bottom upwards, about fifteen miles from Cape Perfue, a new American schooner, of about 100 tuns burthen, fixty feet keel and twenty feet wide; the was principally loaded with lumber, and had also about twenty barrels beef on board, some of them marked Newbury mess, with the initials of some person's name. -- Some money was found in her cabbin-and a watch case marked B. B. I. the name on her Rern worn off-a number of chefts much damaged in the cabbin -- It is supposed she has been upset some time. Several papers were found but it was impossible to read them.
