Such were treated with no mercy; but when brought to town the inhabitants fell upon them with their broad swords and cut them to pieces, leaving their mangled carcafes for the dogs. The inhabitants of the plantations were fleeing in consternation to the towns for safety.

PHILADELPHIA, October 19-It is with the greatest satisfaction that we can now inform the public, from careful inquiry and actual observation, that the mortality in this city has suddenly and surprisingly abated since the rain on Tuelday lait, and the contequent cold northern winds, and frosts .-Not more than eight or ten are now reckoned dangeroully ill at the hospital; the burials in the city visibly for Washington county. decrease; and though those in the latter stages of the disorder cannot be much benefited by the salutary change in the atmosphere; yet still it may be reasonably said, that very little is to be apprehended at present, from the malignant fever, by those in health, who live temperately, and observe a prudent caution in their intercourse with their sick.

A London paper states, that on the zest of July, the combined English and Spanish seets, consisting of 78 fail of the line, were then lying before Toulon.

Accounts from France to August 23, mention some confiderable successes of the armies of the north over portions of the combined armies. On the 19th, the French made an attack on the village of Blanton, and entirely defeated the enemy, putting two companies of emigrant troops to the fword, who were the Orange uniform. On the same day, the French attacked the village of Lincelle, and took possession of a redoubt. South River Ferry. both villages on the same day, leaving behind them their ammunition and baggage waggons. The allied army loft more than one thousand killed, and 40 waggon loads of wounded were seen to go off.

By a decree of the convention, passed August 15, bread, biscuit, all kinds of flesh, fruit, eider, wine, brandy, vinegar, oil, salt, honey, sugar, soap, lard, coal, unwrought iron, paper, linen, fluffs and millinery (filks excepted) are forbidden to be exported from the territories of the republic.

On the 24th the convention decreed, that the livre shall be divided into ten equal parts, called dimes, the dimes into ten parts, named cents, so that a livre shall contain one hundred cents; and that in future all French money should be estimated by livres, and decimal fractions of livres.

On the 14th of August the combined armies had advanced as far as Maubeuge, on their way towards Lifle, but were attacked by the French army; and after a severe action, were obliged to retreat to their former post, near Valenciennes. The infurgents were in confiderable force; but on the 10th of August were defeated at Vendee, with the loss of 7000 men, and a quantity of cannon.

A great many American vessels are detained in the ports of France, in consequence of an embargo, laid by order of the convention.

Governor Galbaud, who lately fled from New-York, has been seized and imprisoned at Fort St. John's in Canada, till the governor's pleasure be known concerning him. On the 25th of September lord Dorchester arrived at Quebec from England.

Captain Martin, of the ship Providence, arrived at New-York, from Leith, in lat. 40, was boarded by the British frigate Boston, on the 7th inst. on a cruise, steering to the fouthward and eastward; and on the 11th he was boarded by the French republic's ship Concorde, to the eastward of Montauk point; the French fleet were then in company; after which they continued their course in the track of the Boston fri-

Letters from Spain to August 18, say, that the expedition of the Spanish and English sleets to the Mediterranean, and Toulon, was completely broken up. A raging malignant fever had prevailed in the Spanish vessels; in consequence of which they returned to Cadiz; and without their co-operation the English did not choose to act. The English had predicted the most complete faccess from this expedition, forgetting the old adage, " that man proposes, and God dispoles."-Our readers may depend that the affairs of France are in a prosperous situation.
