THEREAS it is represented to this general assembly, that the statute of limitation, past in the twenty-first year of the reign of James the first, chapter the fixteenth, having lately received a construction different from what has been hitherto generally given to it: And whereas doubts are now entertained by many of the good citizens of this state, whether tenants in tail, or their heirs, are comprehended within and barred by the said statute, which was passed for the purpose of limiting and prescribing the time within which every action for the recovery of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, should be brought: And whereas both justice and policy dictate that all purchases, made bona fide and sanctioned by a long and quiet possession, but more especially such purchases as have been made and possession retained under what hath been uniformly deemed to be the law of the land should be confirmed and established: And whereas this general affembly are informed and verily believe, that without the intervention of this legislature many of the good people of this state (whose ancestors have honestly purchased and paid for divers tracts of land and transmitted them to their posterity) will shortly be involved in numberless vexations and ruinous law suits under colour of some dormant entails: For declaring therefore the law in all such cases, and for the purpose of quieting all such possessions;

Be it therefore enasted, by the General Assembly of Maryland, That all and every person or persons claiming any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, within this state, and making title thereto as the issue or issues, heir or heirs, of a tenant or tenants in tail, or as a tenant or tenants in tail, whether general or special, shall be fubject and liable to be barred by the statute of the twenty-first of James the first, chapter the fixteenth, and by all other statutes and acts for limiting the time within which any entry shall be made into, or action or suit shall be brought for the recovery of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, used and practised within this state, to every intent and purpose whatever, in as full and ample manner as any perion claiming any right, title or interest, in and to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in fee simple, or otherwie, is now subject and liable to be harred by any of the 10,000 statutes asoresaid. Provided always, that all the lavings and refervations in the said statute in favour of 10fants, femes covert, persons insane and beyond sea, shall be retained and reserved to all issues, heirs and tenants in tail within that description, in the lame manner and on the same construction as they are retained and reserved to heirs in fee simple, and not otherwile, or in any other manner: Provided nevertheless, that the aforesaid act, or any part thereof, shall have no operation, force or effect, as to an caules or fuits of law that may now be actually pending in any of the courts of this state.
