

pieces, each battalion. Answer—The garrison shall march out the third day, with arms, baggage, &c. but when they shall have arrived at the glacis, they shall lay down their arms and take an oath not to serve against the republic, or our allies, unless regularly exchanged.

7. There shall be granted eight covered waggons which shall not be searched. Answer—Refused.

4. The inhabitants of Luxemburg shall enjoy a free exercise of their religion. Answer—The liberty of faith is insured to them, they conforming to the laws of the republic.

5. Their properties shall be sacred. Answer—Inhabitants ought to trust to the loyalty of the French nation. They shall be treated as the other inhabitants of the conquered countries.

By another article it is expressly stipulated that the emigrants, of every description, shall be delivered over to the French troops.

A letter from the representative Talot, confirmed these details. The garrison of Luxemburg consisted of 12,000 men.

Talot moved for some mark of national gratitude for the adjutant-general Alis, who by his talents, had greatly contributed to the conquest of the place.

This officer, who was at the bar, was received with repeated acclamations; and the fraternal kiss was given to him by the president.

Cambaceres then proposed the following decree:

Art. 1. The troops who have made the conquest of Luxemburg, and the army of the Moselle, which had paved the way for the conquest, have not ceased to deserve well of their country.

2. The committee of public welfare is charged to provide for the advancement of the adjutant-general Alis.

3. The representative of the people, Jeobart, shall immediately repair to Luxemburg.

This decree was adopted by acclamation.

The death of Young Capet.

Seventy, in the name of the committee of general safety—"For some time the son of Capet was ill of a swelling in his right knee, and in his left hand. He lost his appetite, and a fever seized him. The celebrated Desfaux, the surgeon, was appointed to see and attend him. His probity and his talents were a sufficient pledge for us that he would neglect none of those duties which humanity demands from us. Nevertheless the disorder increased and began to assume a more serious aspect. On the 16th Prairial Desfaux died. We immediately appointed the citizen Pellatin, a physician of acknowledged ability, and the citizen Demanger, head surgeon of the hospital of health, to attend the boy.

"The bulletin of yesterday, at eleven o'clock, announced very dangerous symptoms, and at half past two o'clock in the afternoon, we received an account of the death of the son of Capet. The committee of general safety have directed me to communicate this to you, and to move, that the Procès Verbeaux, which I hold in my hand, shall be deposited in the national archives." Decreed.
