

we not to fear, if there stands an insurmountable barrier between the oppressed and the magistrate?—Alas! we hoped to find in the third sovereign of the house of Brunswick line, in these critical times, an example of royal virtue; a proof of princely gratitude; a powerful, though solitary argument for the superiority of our form of government.

Is it in vain, that we wished your majesty, no less interested than ourselves in the issue of our prayer to consider your own numerous family, and the vast debts and taxes with which this nation is encumbered—to call to mind the duty which you owe to all and every of the royal offspring, and their progeny, as well as to the people, from whose industry alone the funds necessary for their princely support can be drawn; and to examine, by the test of history, whether ends so essential and indispensable are most likely to be accomplished, by pursuing the reprobate measures of odious ministers, or by giving the people that liberty, peace and reform, which they seek, and which would assure their love, attachment, and generosity.

Listen then, Sirs! to the voice of a wearied and afflicted people, whose grievances are so various that they distract, so enormous that they terrify. Think of the abyss between supplication and despair.—The means of national salvation are in your own hands—it is our right to advise as well as supplicate; and we declare it to be our opinion, that a reform in the representation of the people, the removal of your present ministers, and a speedy peace, are the only means by which the country can be saved, or the attachment of the people secured.

Signed by order of the meeting,
J. BINNS, Chairman.
J. ASHLEY, Secretary.
