

A letter from Paris of November 27, relates that there had been fresh disturbances in that city—The national troops refusing to fire on the people, till they had received the arrears of their pay—but the payment being made and the troops furnished with wine, they attacked the populace and killed 6000 of them—The person writing this letter was himself confined two hours on account of the disturbance.

PHILADELPHIA, February 26.

Extra of a letter dated Pauillac, river of Bourdeaux, December 2.

The new legislature is seriously engaged on the subject of the finances. A plan is talked of for continuing in circulation ten millions of assignats, specially bottomed on the uncolonized national domains; and to the purchase of which those assignats to be assigned. As to the surplus of the paper money, it is to be progressively reimbursed, at the rate of three livres five sous eight deniers for the hundred livres.

Peace is now more talked of than ever; and if we may believe those who have opportunities of being well informed on this point, the preliminaries have been already agreed on; we count on the ensuing spring as the epoch of that happy event.

Extra of a letter from a gentleman at Port-de-Paix, dated January 29.

We have been told a fine story about a fleet with troops coming to attack this place, and the Cape, depend upon it if ever they do come, there will but few remain to tell the sad tale. No less than 50,000 blacks are ready at a day's warning to oppose them, land where they will; and citizen Victor Hughes, has lately sent citizen Lavaux a supply of his wonderful balls, which will tell well among John Bull's fleet. I suppose you never saw people more anxious for any thing than they are here for the arrival of the fleet.

Annapolis, March 3.

William J. Miller, Esq; formerly of Philadelphia; is appointed consul for the United States at Calcutta.

For the government of the merchants concerned, the following information, communicated by the secretary of state, is published:

At the instance of Mr. Bond his Britannic majesty's charge des affaires in the United States; the judge of the vice-admiralty court of Bermuda, has prolonged the term of his interlocutory decrees until the question relative to the blockade of the French ports of the island of St. Domingo could be decided by intelligence from thence. And by the like disposition the requisite intelligence has been obtained from general Williamson, and now transmitted to governor Crauford, to be communicated to judge Green.

As general Williamson the British commander in chief in St. Domingo, has declared that these French ports have not been considered in a state of blockade, but on the contrary that the commerce of the United States with them has been perfectly free, it may be justly expected that all American property, the subject of these interlocutory decrees, will now be discharged.

THOMAS FITSIMONS, Chairman of the committee of merchants.
