3d year, which enjoins all the agents of the republic to respect and observe, in all their dispositions, the treatles which unite France to the neutral powers of the continent, and to the United States of America? the continent, and to the United States of America's that this last law is not delogatory to the law of the oth May, 1793, resolves as follows : Art. 1: The commissions of the Executive Directory, with the civil tribunals of the department, shall take, care that in the contest upon the validity of maritime prizes, no decision that he founded upon the 7th article of the law of the 13th Nivole, without the minister of justice having been previously confulted, conformably to the third article of the law of the 8th Floreal, 4th year, relative to the treatios, in virtue of which neutral persons intend to withdraw themselves, by means of the first of these laws, from the execution of that of the 9th March, 1793.

2. The minister of justice thall examine, whether the treaties shall subsist, or whether they have been modified since the conclusion of them; there shall be furnished to them, by the minister for foreign affairs, all the documents of which they final fland in need, and reference shall he made to the Executive Directory, as it is preferibed by the law of the 8th Flores,

3. The Directory remind all French citizens, that the treaty concluded on the 6th Feb. 1778; between France and the United States, has been, on the terms of the ad article modified of full right by that which has been concluded at London, on the 19th November, 1944, between the United States of America and England in confequence,

After article 17 of the treaty of London, of the 13th Nov. 1794, all merchandile of the enemy's, or merchandile not sufficiently ascertained to be neutral, conveyed under American flags, shall be confiscated; but the ship, on board which such mer-chandise shall be found, shall be released, and given to the proprietor. - The commissaries of the Directory are enjoined to accelerate, by all means in their power, the decision of the contests which shall arise, either upon the validity of the captures of the cargoes, or upon freights and infurance.

According to the 18th article of the treaty of London, dated the 19th Nov. 1794, relative to articles declared contraband by the 24th article of the treaty dated Feb. 6, 1778, are added the following:-Ship timber, cakum, pitch, and refin, copper for sheathing vessels, fails, hemp, and cordage, and every thing which serves, directly or indirectly, to the arming and equipping of veficls, excepting bar iron and fir in planks. These articles shall be con-ficated as often as they shall be destined or attempted to be carried to the enemy.

3. According to the 21st article of the treaty of London, of the above date, every American, who shall hold a commission from the enemies of France, as well as every feaman of that nation, composing the crews of the ships and vessels, shall, by this fact alone, be declared piratical, and treated as such, without suffering the party to establish that the act was the consequence of threats or violence.

4. In pursuance of the law of the 14th of Feb. 1793, the regulations of the 21st Oct. 1744, and of the 26th July, 1778, respecting the manner of vessels and neutral merchandise, shall be complied with according to their form and tenor.

Every American fhin shall therefore be deemed & lawful prize, which free not have on board a bill of lading in due form, according to the plan annexed to the treaty of the 6th Feb. 1778, the execution of which is enjoined by the 25th and 27th articles of

5. The commissionen of the Executive Directory are required to carry into effect the penalties that at-tach on all clandesline attempts that may be made by Americans, or vessels belonging to any other nation, to pass as neutral, on board the vessels where the fraud is attempted to be practifed, in the manner that these penalties have been repeatedly carried into effect during the present war. The penalty shall attach where the blanks in the configuments and invoices are not filled up, though figured and fealed, where the papers are in the form of letters, containing fictitious fignatures, where are double passports or policies, specifying different deflinations; where configuratent is made to two or more factors, and where there are different receipts or papers of any kind, which confign the whole, or part, of the fame goods to different owners or different definations.

(Signed) REWBELL, President, LEGARDE, Sec. Gen.

degree, had subfifed in other ages and other countries, adopted fram some diftionest motive ? tion. Whether itablefings are to be preferred or loft, must in no small digree depend on the conduct of the people themlelves.

If they with for good laws; they must choose able and distanced min to make them? It they with for officert adequate to their fations in the other departments of government, it is in their power directly or indirectly to fecure them by a diferest and judicious exercise of the choice with which they are invested. If in any particular their confidence should be abused, a plain and adequate remedy is provided. After a flated interval their legislators may be changed. Without any delay, but such as the occasion must require, any public officer, who has misseneed, is liable to trial, punishment and disgrace. To this may be added, what probably is not the weakest restraint, the general odium that must attend a manifest departure from duty in in important public employment.

The people at large having these securities for the saithful discharge of offices of public trust, it is fit that those whom they select as their officers should have fome fecurity on their part. It is not to be presumed that men, chosen is they are, should be remarkably deficient either in ability or integrity, and therefore they have a right to expect that their conduct flould not immediately be condemned, merely because some persons are ready to find fault with it. The task they have to perform is of no common magnitude both as to difficulty and importance. If in the small concerns private life few men can conduct themselves with firict regularity and exactness, and unexpected difficulties will disconcert even the most orderly and discreet, can we conceive the path perfectly plain and obvious for the government of millions of men, who, though possessing one common and united interest, have an ininite variety of private views tending to divert them from the great object of union, even if their understandings and dispositions were perfectly alike? But if to this we add the various degrees of their understanding, their different means of improvement and infor-mation, the delusive and dangerous passions by which many are guided, the activity of bad citizens, the fupinenels of good, until some critical alarm alike actuates both to a struggle which may endanger the government at the moment when its utmost energies are necessary, we cannot wonder at the diversity of opinion which prevails in respect to most public measures, nor at the confequences which follow from rival fentiments, too apt to difturb the temper even of the bett minds, but which unavoidably give a full scope to the paffions of weak, arrogant, or unprincipled men, who either make no allowances for difficulties which weak minds never perceive, or from an excess of vanity and prefumption, suppose none can surmount them but themselves, or with views too base to be avowed, hefitate not to gratify malignant propensities of their own, without the slightest independent regard to the honour, the interest, or even the fafety of their country. Such eauses must often produce great agitation in any country, but must operate with increased and dangerous vigous in one, like our own, composed of many powerful flates, to a great degree independent of each other, having either real or imaginary differences of local in-terest, and with little other effectual cement to bind them together, but a fense of foreign external danger, which, with respect to many, will be apt to operate but too weakly antil it has increased to a magnitude which aftonishes and confounds them.

Confiderations like these are calculated to impress upon the mind that falutary caution with which all public measures ought to be examined. If it be a point of duty or juitice, we need inquire.
Policy is out of the question: The duty must be perwould be for ever unjust, and morality would be a name, if exceptions were once admitted upon any principle whatever to a strict observance of it. If a subject of policy is in question, nothing affords greater room for real differences of opinion. The wifell men, with the best motives, have been always divided upon such as the contract of the contrac fuch questions, and always will be-because nothing is more fallible than human judgment, when it extends its views into a futurity for the greatest part to impenetrably hid from the fight of man. All political owners or different definations.

6. By this article, providious of the treaty of the quently must partate of the impericulou of the grounds flour if continued must inevitably give fuccess. So on which they are adopted. Difficience, therefore, is critical and peculiar is our fituation, that nothing can are repealed, as far as they apply to infurance.

7. The present treaty, shall be published in the and in reality, they are, for the most past, the best distribution. The ministers of marine and of the laws. The ministers of marine and of the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and for foreign affairs, are the colonies, of justice, and their respective that it stoud be such a decision as the people them, ment is so foreign affairs, are the colonies have deliberately thoughts best adapted to the effect, and those means when necessary be drawn sorth. measures must be grounded on such views, and confefelves have deliberately thought belt adapted to the calest it is indeed, as well as all other political inti-jeds; a natural and proper object; of their review for their pwn fake, that review ought to be conducted, with temper and moderation. Before they condemn any one measure, where form measure was necessary, they ought to be very form that a better could be adopted. A Charge delivered to the grand jury for the district, with temper and moderation. Hefore they condemn of Maryland, in the Circuit court of the United any one measure, where some measure was necessary. States, held at Annapolis, on the 8th of May, 1707, they ought to be very fure that a better could be adopted, by the honourable James Iredell, one of the association. None can ever be adopted without some inconveniencies are justices of the Supreme court of the United.—Few, perhaps, without some advantages. It is the part of wildow to weigh one spanish the other, and ste juffices of the Supreme cours.

Genelates of the Supreme cours.

THE frequent setums of course of juffice necessarily accessions us an effect on into origin from which they flow. However painful such review may be to said graitude. We trace the origin of ours as well as of severy other inthority on the purell source from which any authority can be derived; the spontaneous but deliberate grant of the people themselves for whole benefit in it established. Liberty, to a considerable is the right, to determine that the measure has been also been a superior of the people themselves for whole benefit in its established. Liberty, to a considerable is the right, to determine that the measure has been a superior of the people themselves for whole introduced to be ready to the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole introduced to people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for whole in the superior of the people themselves for the people of the peo

but such an exercise of it as this (notwithstanding the suy one man, to charge another with dishonesty with fancisus opidion of some ingenious writers) probably out proof? Let him prove and punish if he can—If he strik took place in our own: The attempt was noble, can do neither, but will throw our calumny as random, and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand in the view of his sellowicing and the success hitherto has been beyond all expects—he must stand and the success hit sellowicing and the su can do neither, but will throw our calumny as random, he must stand in the siew of his fellow-civizens as a Banderer, and incur the suspicion that his readinet to suspect others of dishonourable intentions, has probe fuspeth others of dishonourable intentions, has probably arisen from something in the texture of his own mind which led him to ascribe worthless motives as the most natural inducement of action. The part surely for every man who loves his country, but who disapproves of any public authoritative decision, is to submit to it with diffidence and respect, considering the many chances there are that his own opinion may be really wrong, though he cannot perceive it to be further that whether it be or not he doer not live in a despotie. government where any one man's opinion, not even his own, is to decide for all others; and that the very basis of all republican governments in particular, is, the submission of a minority to the majority, where a majority are constitutionally authorited to decide. For a man to call himself a republican wit at entertrining this fentiment, is folly: To be one, without acting upon it, is impossible.

Since, therefore, the plaineft dictates of duty, and the principles of republicanifur itself, which in their due application ennoble the human mind, though nothing can more dilgrace it than the abuse of them, sequire of us all to obey the laws of our ceuntry, it is incumbent on us to take care that an obligation to important be not rendered merely nominal, but that every individual shall perform his share of the common truft, or aniver for his neglect of it. Many initances of neglect or indifference towards it, which may have great effects en the happinels of his country, are of a nature not punishable by human laws, and the punishment of then, therefore, mutt be left to the confeience of the individual, and the reproach which a violation of the ules of morality, though uhaccompanied by any human tanction, feldom tails to draw upon it. There are, however, others of fo ferious a nature, and to directly tending either to dettroy or injure the fociety at large, that laws are provided by it for their punishment; and without such laws, and a due execution of them, no fociety could fubfill, for an idea that all men will sapport voluntarily any government, however excellent, or cheerfully obey any laws, however wife, is ridiculous. But as it is of great moment to ettablish some laws containing penal sanctions, so it is also of the highest importance that the execution of their should be provided for in such a manuer, as to fecure as much as possible the conviction only of the guilty, leaving time cence nothing to fear. The mode of protecution to long adopted in our country probably contains this fecurity in its utmost extent; accusation by one jay-trial by another-the trial being aitogether public-witnesses adduced face to face-the pritoner under no rettraint but from mere confinement -challinges to a confiderable number in all capital cafes to let afide jurors even for momentary diffikethe jury not being a permanent, but an occasional bo-dy, liable to be affected either as members of the community, or as individuals who may be subjected to a similar profecution, by their own precedents. All these circumstances probably provide as great a fecurity for innocence as is compatible with avoiding a total immunity for guilt. With us, happily, the is no theoretic fpeculation: None of us can remember a time when these privileges were not in a great degree familiar to us; fo familiar indeed, that knowing scarcely any thing of oppressive profecutions, but from the history of other countries, we are too apt to undervalue this inestimable blessing in our own.

To you, gentlemen, are committed profecutions for offences against the United States. The object is the preservation of a union, without which undoubtedly we thould not now be enjoying the rights of an independent people, and without the support of which it is in vain to think we can continue to enjoy the m. This country has great energies for defence, and by supporting each other might defy the world. But it we disunite, if we fuffer differences of opinion to corrode into enimity, jealoufy to rankle into diffruft, weak men to delude by their folly, abandoned men to diffurb the order of fociety by their crimes, we must expect nothing but a fate as ruinous as it would be difgraceful, that of inviting fome foreign nation to foment and take advantage of our internal discords, fifth making us the dupe and then the prey of an ambition we excited by our divisions, and ito which thole divierted, and thole means when necessary be drawn forth. To rely upon the a light not only our indipentable duty but the only chances his fecuring that union of fpirit and exertion without which in a moment of danger no efforts can be of any avail. For an yearsthan union has preferved us through multiplied dangers; and more than once referred us from impending ruin. I trull it will fall display itself with its wonted efficacy, and that no threats, no artifices, no devotion to names, without meaning, or professions without fiberrity, will be expassed of weakening, by any impression on a sentible people, a cement estential to their explicate.

I have troubled you with this address, gentlemen, on account its on account of the extreme importance of the matter of it is the present moment. The fentiments have flowed warmly from my heart, and I flatter myself are not uncongenial, it your own, The present flustion of our rountry is such as to require the exertion of, all good men to support and save it. Lenter into no para-siculars, as the legislature of the United States are on