DR. FENDALL

HAVING arrived in Annapolis, on his way to Baltimore, takes the liberty to intimate to the citizens, that he means to exercise his skill, in the line of his profession, for a week or two here, and may be spoke with at Mr. Wharf's.

The doctor's knowledge of the natural history of the human teeth, their adjacent parts, and the disorders to which they are incident, acquired by assiduous attention and unremitting study, and the experience of an extensive course and successful series of practice, for upwards of twenty-two years, will, he hopes, entitle him to the confidence of any, and all of those who wish to employ him. He kindly flatters himself he has it happily in his power to appeal, without fear, to such as have been his patients, in the states of Maryland, Virginia, &c. for that degree of reputation his conduct, as a dentist, may have merited, and given him just claim to. The doctor hopes, at least, he is considered as entitled to the highest grade amongst those of his profession in this country.

The doctor begs leave to offer to the public his Columbian antiseptic dentifrice, infinitely superior, he thinks, both in elegance and efficacy, to any thing hitherto used for the teeth and gums; it renders the breath sweet and agreeable, and is a powerful antiseptic, free from any corrosive preparation whatever. This invaluable preparation, which he avers to be truly efficacious, not only for remedying the disorders of the teeth and gums, but likewise, if possible, for preventing them, no family (and especially where there are children) should be without, is still sold, and only by the doctor at this time, for the moderate price of 7/6 a pot, with directions, and to prevent counterfeit and fraud, each pot is covered with a paper, on which is a circular flowery margin, and around the same is written (on the inside) "Dr. Fendall's Columbian Dentifrice," with the doctor's seal, B. F. impressed on wax, in the middle of the circle.
