

A DAILY PAPER.

Will be published in the City of Washington, on the first day of the next session of Congress, a daily paper, under the title of The Washington Advertiser.

CONDITIONS:

- I. IT will be published daily during the session of Congress; and during the recess, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The most judicious arrangements will be made to forward it to subscribers with the utmost regularity and dispatch. II. It will be printed on a half sheet of super-royal paper of good quality, with an elegant new type. III. No industry and application of talents will be spared in the editorial and mechanical departments, to render it interesting to the judgment and agreeable to the eye. IV. The price will be five dollars per annum, to be paid annually on the first day of June annually; and as the editors pledge themselves to comply rigorously with the three preceding articles, they will exact as strict a compliance with the fourth.

The critical situation in which our country is placed, and the difficulty of steering the barque is which every thing dear to Americans is freighted, between the "Scylla and Charybdis" which threaten it, merit at this time peculiarly engage the attention of our countrymen. Newspapers are necessarily sought for, if not as the most correct, at least as the most early source of information; and the Washington Advertiser, from being a diligent vehicle of the proceedings of Congress and such official publications as government may deem it proper to make, and from having an active correspondent and proprietor in a sea-port where foreign vessels are daily arriving, holds out advantages to the public, equal at least, to any other paper on the continent. On this ground, it looks up to a liberal community for support.

BROWN & SNOWDEN.

THE subscriber, after having in vain made personal applications to many of his debtors, without any success, once more calls upon all those who are indebted to him to come forward and settle their accounts, or in such proportions as are convenient for them at this time; he admonishes them to take particular notice of this call, and not reduce him to the disagreeable necessity of taking more rigorous measures with his old friends, for whom he has the highest estimation, and whose support, when he kept tavern, he takes this opportunity to acknowledge with the most lively gratitude; he will very much regret that his own wants, (which are very pressing) with the neglect of others, should finally compel him to break with them, he therefore entreats them to come forward and pay what sums (if ever so small) may be in their power. Those who have shewn no disposition to come to a settlement will be sued next fall court, unless they come forward before.

ers, either to the governor and council, or to certain private individuals. Either, according to their doctrine, may be done with propriety. But, for the sake of decency, they would, I trust, deem it expedient to transfer these important powers; not to private individuals, but to the executive. In the event then of such a call, the right of suffrage of the people of Maryland, would, probably be given to the governor and council. It thence results, that if the executive should convene the present legislature, their sole object would be to get into their own hands, and under their own absolute control, those essential privileges of the people, which they have hitherto happily enjoyed, and which they have not in any instance abused. Thus it must appear to our executive; and this, and other views of the subject, will, I trust, from a principle of delicacy, and from other nobler motives, restrain them from such an unprecedented proceeding. In all the pride of a Marylander, I, with the greatest confidence, indulge the pleasing persuasion, that our executive will, at this juncture, be as dignified and as correct as the governor of New-York, who, upon an application precisely similar, replied, that although he heartily and cordially concurred with them in their contemplated object, yet he could not allow himself to convert the great executive authority of the government into a mere instrument of party. And knowing himself to be the chief magistrate of a powerful and respectable state, inhabited by people of various political sentiments, he could not suffer himself to be an organ of the will and pleasure of any one party.

Mr. CHARLES CARROLL, jun. takes this opportunity of informing his friends and fellow-citizens of Anne-Arundel, that he shall remove his residence to Baltimore the ensuing fall, and is therefore under the necessity of requesting those, who meant to honour him with their confidence at the next election, to consider his name withdrawn from the list of candidates for the general assembly, as it will not be in his power to serve them with that punctuality, which a representative owes to his constituents.
