

For the MARYLAND GAZETTE.

To Dr. HAMILTON, author of the celebrate WORM LOZENGES.

HOW much, great HAMILTON, were we Deceived by ancient forms; Since all diseases now we see, Originate from worms.

"Men," it is said, ate creeping worms; Mere reptiles weak and vain, They crawl on earth, 'till death alarms; Then turn to earth again.

That females too are worms we find, Since Eve brought on us evil, And for an apple freely joined, With that curst worm the Devil.

Boys too, have worms of wondrous length; Ne'er seen in times of yore, Nor do I doubt their mighty strength, The entrails to devour.

For all mankind in every clime, Are worms of some degree; Then why, dear doctor, waste your time, To set our bowels free.

Know that thy art and powder's vain, Since statelimen it is seen, Cannot with it, their worm refrain; Or cure it's wonted spleen.

That worms will know their kindred kind, We hourly may see, Altho' for others, a cure you find, Yet worms shall eat 'em thence.
