Died at Philadelphia, on the 13th inst. commodore JOHN BARRY. The name of this veteran patriot and arms, will long be dear to the citizens of the United States—He was one of that little band of naval heroes who first hoisted the flag of the American navy, in the year 1775, and to his valour our country owed much of the honour she acquired on the seas during the revolutionary war. Integrity, good temper, and universal civility of manners marked his conduct in social life, while a series of uncommon acts of kindness and friendship endeared him to all his domestic connexions.
