 JOHN ELLIOTT, on the premises.

In CHANCERY, January 7, 1804.
Smallwood's creditors against his heirs.

WHEREAS several claims exhibited against the estate of general William Smallwood, deceased, have not been accompanied by sufficient vouchers, and therefore not passed, although not absolutely rejected, and a long time hath elapsed without any thing on their part being done; it is, at the instance of the trustees, who are anxious to close their trust, adjudged and ordered, that no claim in this court shall be passed, after the first day of September next, against the said estate, but that the chancellor will, on application, decide on any of the said claims before the said day; this is, however, to have no effect, unless it be published at least thrice in the Maryland Gazette, and at least twice in each of three weeks in the National Intelligencer, before the first day of March next; it is further ordered, that on the examination or hearing of any of the claims aforesaid, depositions before a single magistrate made shall be received as evidence; such other testimony as is receivable by the orphans court is usually required by the chancellor.
