

Humbolt assures us, that several volcanoes in the Andes throw up at times a muddy substance, mixed with a large quantity of fresh water, and with it a number of fish, which do not appear to be injured, nor to have been exposed to a great heat: They are sometimes ejected from the crater of the volcano; and sometimes from lateral apertures; but they always come from the height of from twelve to thirteen hundred toises above the level plains. Humbolt is of opinion that these fish are bred in lakes in the interior of the crater. [London paper.]

From Halifax, August 18.

"On the 16th inst. three line of battle ships arrived here—one of 98 guns and two 74's—They belong to Admiral Cochran's Squadron, on the West-India station, and were damaged at sea in a hurricane, which lasted 19 hours.—The 98 gun ship was in great distress."

The two following paragraphs are from a London paper of July 14.

A man led his wife and child, on Monday fortnight, into the public market at Tuxford, in Yorkshire, with halters about their necks, and sold them for five shillings.

On Friday afternoon a woman who had been in the workhouse, and on bad terms with her husband, took leave of him, never intending to return to him again, exposed herself for sale in Smithfield market with a halter about her neck; she was soon surrounded by a multitude of people, but there were no bidders. The constables having orders to suppress such immoral scenes, drove her out of the market, and she returned home to her husband who felt himself greatly disappointed on the occasion, but to console him she promised to go to a country market, where she hopes to meet with better success.

SALEM, September 2.

THE TRIPOLINE PEACE.

We have understood that there were one hundred and fifty Americans, principally volunteers, with Gen. Eaton, upon the Expedition which went by land against Tripoli. Gen. Eaton acted under the express command of the government of the United States—be departed in July, 1804, in the American Squadron from Washington, and was landed from one of the United States vessels, at Alexandria, in Egypt, in the month of December last: it is understood he was supplied with large sums of money, ammunition, field artillery, camp equipage, muskets, pikes, &c. for the troops, and, in short, every thing necessary for the expedition. Gen. Eaton was accompanied with several American officers, but we have heard of no particular names.—The ex-bathaw was found in Alexandria, and readily agreed to assist in raising the army. What the particular stipulations on both sides were, we have yet to learn. We only know at present, that 5 or 6000 men were soon collected, and that they marched to the westward, along the Barbary shore, until they encountered the Tripoline forces, in the vicinity of Derne, a town on the eastern borders of, and belonging to Tripoli; here a victory was gained by the American army, and the place immediately surrendered.

CHARLESTON, August 27.

The brig Hope, Dawson, arrived yesterday morning, sailed from Lucea, (Jam.) in company with 80 sail of British homeward bound merchantmen, under convoy of the Vanguard, of 74 guns, and several brigs, and parted with them on the 20th instant. While captain Dawson was in company, one of the fleet, the Hero, took fire, and burnt to the water's edge; another got ashore, and was lost near Cape Corientes; the crews of both vessels were taken on board the other ships.

Poet's Corner.

SELECTED.

[We can conceive of a mother who could renounce a daughter for her crimes and her disobedience; but that parent who could read the following pathetic and pensive lines from a dying child, and still continue unrelenting, however great her crimes and her disobedience, must be worse than a villain-tyrope.] [Edit. Wanderer.]

THE DYING DAUGHTER TO THE MOTHER.

MY Mother! when these unsteady lints
Thy long averted eyes shall see,
This hand that writes, this heart that pines,
Will cold, quite cold, and tranquil be.
That guilty child, so long disown'd,
Can then, blest thought! no more offend;
And should'st thou deem my crimes aton'd,
O deign my Orphan to befriend:—
That Orphan, who with trembling hand,
To thee will give my dying prayer—
Can'st thou my dying prayer withstand,
And from my Child withhold thy care?
O raise the veil which hides her cheek,
Nor start her mother's face to see,
But let her look thy love bespeak—
For once that face was dear to thee.
Gaze on—and thou'lt perchance forget
The long, the mournful lapse of years,
Thy couch with tears of anguish wet,
And e'en the guilt which caus'd those tears,
And in my pure and artless child
Thou'lt think her mother meets thy view;
Such as she was when life first smil'd,
And guilt by name alone she knew.
Ah! then I see thee o'er her charms
A look of fond affection cast;
I see thee clasp her in thine arms,
And in the present lose the past.
But soon the dear illusion flies;
The sad reality returns,
My crimes again in memory rise,
And ah! in vain my orphan mourns:
Till suddenly some keen remorse,
Some deep regret her claims shall aid,
Nor wrath that held too long its course,
For words of peace too long delay'd.
For pardon, (most, alas! denied
When pardon might have snatch'd from shame,)
And kindness, had'st thou kindness tried,
And check'd my guilt, and sav'd my fame.
And then thou'lt wish as I do now,
Thy hand my humble bed had smooth'd,
Wip'd the chill moisture off my brow,
And all the wants of sickness sooth'd.
For, oh! the means to sooth my pain,
My poverty has still denied;
And thou wilt wish, and sigh in vain,
Thy riches had those means supplied.
Thou'lt wish, with keen repentance wrung,
I'd clos'd my eyes upon thy breast,
Expiring while the faltering tongue
Pardon in kindest tones express'd.
O sounds which I must never hear!
Through years of woe my fond desire;
O mother, spite of all most dear!
Must I unblest'd by thee expire?
Thy love alone I call to mind,
And all thy past disdain forget—
Each keen reproach, each frown unkind,
That crush'd my hopes when last we met.
But when I saw that angry brow,
Both health and youth were still my own;
O mother! could'st thou see me now,
Thou would'st not have the heart to frown.
But see! my Orphan's cheek displays
Both youth and health's carnation dyes,
Such as on mine in happier days,
So fondly charm'd thy partial eyes.
Grief o'er her bloom a veil now draws,
Grief her lov'd parent's pangs to see;
And when thou think'st upon the cause,
That paleness will have charms for thee:
And thou wilt fondly press that cheek,
Bid happiness its bloom restore;
And thus in tenderest accents speak,
"Sweet Orphan, thou shalt mourn no more."
But wilt thou thus indulgent be?
O! am I not by hope beguil'd?
The long, long anger shewn to me,
Say, will it not pursue my child?
And must she suffer for my crime?
Ah, ho! forbid it gracious Heaven!
And grant, O grant, in thy good time,
That she be lov'd, and I forgiven!
