

Some writer in London has exhibited a serious charge against an elevated personage; and Commissioners have been appointed to inquire into the accusation. It is conjectured the person alluded to is the prince of Wales.

[Baltimore pap.]

Our correspondent at St. Louis, under date of the 3d June, informs us, that parties run very high in that quarter—the troops stationed there were sent down the Mississippi, but no fears were entertained from the Indians. Traders from the Missouri were coming in every day—No accounts from captains Lewis and Clarke—it is expected they will come home by the way of China. The gentlemen who have gone from Georgia sometime ago, have enjoyed the most perfect health.

[Georgia paper.]

On Friday, the 15th instant, the emperor Buonaparte entered the 37th year of his age. We understand the grand military fête which he promised his army after the battle of Austerlitz, was to commence on that day in Paris, and to continue three days.

[Boston paper.]

Mr. Munroe, the American minister, has taken a boat for the season at Low-Leyton.

[Lon. pap.]

It is extraordinary how time adds to the value of some things:—a brass half crown, of James II. coined in Ireland, lately sold for ten guineas.

At a sale of the effects of the late Mr. Frankland, of Suffolk, a load-stone sold for 150l. an Orrery for 550l. and a Turning Lathe for one thousand and sixty pounds.

Ibid.

A few days ago, says a late Limerick paper, a man was summoned to appear before our chief magistrate, charged with a species of grand larceny, unknown in this part of the United Kingdom, to wit, selling his wife for 10 guineas, and then passing another man's wife on the purchaser instead of his own—Spentia fultus.

NEW-ORLEANS, July 26.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Fort Adams, to his friend in this city, dated 21st July.

"We are hourly expecting the arrival of general Wilkinson. In his late letter to the commanding officer here, he promised to be at this place by the 20th instant, if his orders were not countermanded.

"I am not enough of a politician, statesman or soldier, to tell what is the contemplated movement."

ALBANY, August 14.

Extract of a letter from his excellency gov. Hull to his friend in this city, dated Detroit, 11th July, 1806.

"I arrived here the 6th June; the territory was in a high state of alarm; they expected an attack by the Indians; they were building blockhouses and stockades for an hundred miles in extent. I immediately sent for the chiefs of the different nations. They came according to my request, and in a few days every thing was explained to their satisfaction. They are perfectly friendly, and every thing is entirely tranquil. The people have returned to their usual employments."

PHILADELPHIA, August 22.

We are concerned to state, that by the recent arrivals, positive information is received of the prevalence, in certain West-India islands, of an unusual degree of sickness, we have been particularly informed, that this is the case with St. Jago de Cuba and Port-au-Prince.

BALTIMORE, August 21.

Captain M'Combs, arrived here yesterday from Trinidad, informs that gen. Miranda failed the 25th July, accompanied by a ship, 2 brigs and 3 or 4 schooners—supposed for Margaretta.

Captain Lewis, late of the Leander, (one of Miranda's vessels) has arrived at New-York from Grenada, who gives a very unfavourable account of the prospects of Miranda's expedition—He left him at Trinidad, from whence he has since failed.

August 23.

The day before the Jane (arrived here yesterday from Lagaira) failed, 4 of the officers of Miranda's two schooners, taken by the Spaniards, were hung in gibbets, and it was said that 10 had been hanged out of the 58, and the remainder sent in chains to the mines—one of the men taken had a wife and six children in New-York—one of his sons was with him, and was set at liberty.

A letter from Nashville, Tennessee, dated July 20, says, "Nothing remarkable has occurred in this quarter of late; there appears at present no probability of a rupture with our neighbours, the Spaniards."

A letter from St. Helena, dated May 3d, says, "A large fleet of men of war, and transports, have just arrived here from the cape of Good Hope, destined against the Spanish possessions on the river Plate."

NOFOLK, August 19.

Arrived, Julia, Vickery, 76 days from St. Ubes. August 5th, lat. 37, 25, N. long. 69, W. was boarded by the French ship Patriot of 74 guns, Admiral Vilemez, in company with 4 other line of battle ships.

SELECTED.

From the Port Folio.

The Procellarius-pelagicus is the bird commonly known to mariners by the name of Mother Carey's Chicken. In size, form, colour, and motion on the wing, it bears a general resemblance to the swallow. It may be said rather to float than swim upon the water, changing its place only by flight. I conjecture that it is not web-footed; for, to what purpose should so small an animal swim, upon so extensive a surface as the sea? Besides, for every action it rises in the air. The ocean is its resting-place. If it be to eat, it does this sitting, like the duck, but expands its wings, which it constantly flutters, while, half standing on the water, it pecks at its food, in the manner of a chicken, whence, it may be presumed, its name. It is amusing to see it, in this attitude, raised and lowered by the waves, still standing on the surface, and still picking at the scrap.

ODE,

TO THE PROCELLARIUS-PELAGICUS.

TINY wand'rer of the deep,
Tell me whence thy distant way?
Where thou dost in safety sleep?
Where thy home, thou vagrant, lay?

On what course my bark I steer,
Where unmeasur'd waters roar,
Tiny wand'rer, thou art near,
Careless which way lies the shore!

In my far-borne vessel's wake,
All day long thou hover'st nigh;
Poking morsels, thou dost take,
There, thy humble life's supply.

Thou when ev'ning's star serene,
Glistens in the glassy main,
All beside me, sitt'st unseen,
Chirping stirr'st; a tuttle's strain!

Hence art thou the seaman's hate;
When thou sing'st, dead falls the gale;
Calms the rolling ship await;
Idle hangs the swagging sail.

Tiny wand'rer of the deep,
Tell me whence thy distant way?
Where thou dost in safety sleep?
Where thy home, thou vagrant, lay?

On what secret rock, or beach,
Do thy callow offspring rest?
Or, as fabling sailors teach,
Is the tossing wave thy nest?

Tiny wand'rer, tender form,
O'er this drear expansion roaming,
How abidest thou the storm
Skies inclement, ocean foaming?

Little fragile skiff! thy keel
By what compass dost thou guide?
For thy wants the hand reveal
That doth here the shores provide?

Bird, we tiny wand'ers are,
Wand'ring over sea or land;
One sure hand's sustaining care;
One, the all-sustaining hand!

DUELLING.

AS a proof to what a pitch duelling is arrived in England, a letter (of which the following is a literal copy) was lately exhibited before Mr. Bond and Sir William Parsons, the Bow-street magistrates, by the person to whom it was addressed, who, as well as his opponent, are two journeymen hair dressers, on a visit to London to learn the present fashion of dressing the ladies:

"Mr. H.—,

"For the gentlemen like conduct and what you have been saying about me and as it is not in my power to you fight you in the pught stile I chaling you fight you to-morrow morning with pestles near the wring art 6 o'clock I shewl fertanly attend.

J. W."

From the Political Barometer.

MR. MITCHEL,

SHOULD you think the following cure for a Felon or Whitlow, worth publishing, it is at your service:

Make a thin mortar of lime and soap, take a thimble that has a top, fill it with the above-mentioned mortar, place it directly over the part affected, bind it tight, with a cloth, so as to prevent the air from getting under the thimble; let it remain two hours, then renew it again, and so continue for the space of ten hours, unless the matter appears wholly to be extracted.

For a Poultice.

Take the green bark of elder and bitter-sweet, boil them well together in water, then thicken it with Indian meal, apply it to the affected part for the space of 48 hours; after that any healing salve will answer.

If the above receipt be thoroughly attended to, it may be depended upon as a certain cure. I can witness a number of cures it has effected.

AN ENEMY TO PAIN.
