Poet's Corner.

SELECTED.

DARBY AND JOAN.

WHEN Darby saw the setting sun,
He swung his scythe and home he rub,
Sat down, drank his quart, and said,
"My work is done, I'll go to bed."
"My work is done!" retorted Joan,
"My work is done! your constant tone;
But helpless woman ne'er can say,
Her work is done till judgment day:
You men can sleep all night, but we Must toil!"—"Whose fault is that? Quoth he,
"I know your meaning," Joan replied,
"But Sir my tongue shall not be tied;
I will go out, and let you know,
What work poor women have to do:
First, in the morning, though we feel
As sick as drunkards when they reel;
Yes, feel such pains in back and head
As would confine you men to bed,
We ply the brush, we wield the broom,
We air the beds, and right the room:
The cows must next be milk'd—and then
We get the breakfast for the men.
Ere this is done, with whimpering cries,
And bristly hair, the children rise;
These must be dress'd, and dress'd with-rue,
And fed—and all because of you:
We next—here Darby scratch'd his head
And stole off grumbling to his bed;
And only said, as on the run,
"Zounds! women's clack is never done."
At early dawn, ere Phoebus rose,
Old Joan resum'd her tale of woes;
When Darby thus—'I'll end the strife,
You be the man, and I the wife:
Take you the scythe and mow, while I
Attend to your domestic cares supply.
Content, quoth Joan, give me my flint,
This Darby did, and out she went.
Old Darby rose and seiz'd the broom,
And whirl'd the dirt about the room;
Which having done, he scarce new how,
He hied to milk the brindle cow.
The brindle cow whisk'd round her tail
In Darby's eyes, and kick'd the pail,
The clown, perplex'd with grief and pain,
Swore he'd ne'er try to milk again.
When turning round, in sad amaze,
He saw his cottage in a blaze;
For as he chanc'd to brush the room
In careless haste, he fir'd the broom.
The fire at last subdu'd he swore,
The broom and him would meet no more,
Press'd by misfortune and perplex'd,
Darby prepared for breakfast next;
But what to get he scarcely knew—
The bread was spent, the butter too.
His hands bedaub'd with paste and flour,
Old Darby labour'd full an hour:
But luckless wight! that couldst not make
The bread take form of loaf or cake.
As every door wide open stood,
In push'd the sow in quest of food:
And stumbling onwards, with her snout,
O'erfet the churn—the cream ran out;
As Darby turn'd, the sow to beat,
The slippery cream betray'd his feet;
He caught the bread-trough in his fall,
And down came Darby, trough and all.
The children, waken'd by the clatter,
Start up and cry, "ah! what's the matter!"
Old Jowler bark'd and Tabby mew'd,
And hapless Darby bawl'd aloud,
"Return my Joan, as heretofore,
I'll play the housewife's part no more:
Since now, by an experience taught
Compar'd to thine, my work is naught,
Henceforth, as business calls, I'll take,
Content, the plough, the scythe, the rake,
And never more transgress the line
Our fates have mark'd, while thou art mine
Then Joan, return, as heretofore,
I'll vex thy honest soul no more;
Let each our proper task attend—
Forgive the past, and strive to mend."
