STANZAS, BY MRS. ROBINSON.

To a gentleman who asked her opinion of a Kiss.

WHAT is a Kiss? 'Tis but a seal,
That warmly printed, soon decays!
'Tis but a zephyr, taught to steal
Where fleeting falsehood smiling plays.

The breeze will kiss the flow'r! but soon
From flower to weed inconstant blows,
Such is the kiss of love, the boon
Which fickle fancy oft bestows.

A glowing kiss once Venus gave,
The rose that caught her lover's sigh;
That rose with every gale would wave,
At every glance of morning die.

Would ope its bosom to the beam
That glowing noon promiscuous threw,
Or to the twilight's parting gleam,
Would yield promiscuous tears of dew.

Oft to the bee its sweets would give,
And flaunt its odours wild around;
With honey'd breath bid pleasure live,
Or, with its hidden mischiefs, wound.

This rose was white, and to be blest
Around it myriad insects flew;
Charm'd by the wonders of its breast,
Thrice essenc'd in the summer's dew.

But when the lip of beauty shed
A rival beauty on that breast,
It blush'd, and droop'd its fragrant head,
Asham'd to be so proudly blest!

Its colour chang'd, a crimson glow
Fix'd on its alter'd form appears,
While round the fighting zephyrs blow,
And nature bathes its breast with tears.

Then does not every kiss impart,
In magic spells of speechless pleasure,
Reproaches to the wandering heart
That knows not how to prize the treasure?

SUN-SET.

SOFT o'er the mountain's purple brow
Meek twilight draws her shadows grey;
From tufted woods, and vallies low,
Light's magic colours steal away.

Yet still, amid the spreading gloom,
Resplendent glow the western waves,
That roll o'er NEPTUNE'S coral caves,
A zone of light on evening's dome.

On this lone summit let me rest,
And view the forms to fancy dear,
'Till on the ocean's darkened breast
The stars of evening tremble clear;
Or the moon's pale orb appear,
Throwing her line of radiance wide,
Far o'er the lightly curling tide,
That seems the yellow sands to chide.

No sounds o'er silence now prevail,
Save of the dying vale below,
Or sailor's song borne on the gale,
Or oar at distance striking flow.

So sweet, so tranquil may my evening ray,
Set to this world, and rise in future day.

FROM THE REPOSITORY.

It would be a pity not to preserve the following Anecdote, which displays so much of that accuracy of observation which is known to be one of the characteristics of our red Brethren of the West.

AN Indian upon his return home to his hut one day, discovered that his venison, which had been hung up to dry, had been stolen. After taking his observations upon the spot, he set off in pursuit of the thief, whom he tracked through the woods. After going some distance he met some persons of whom he inquired if they had not seen a little old white man with a short gun, and accompanied by a small dog, with a bob-tail! They replied in the affirmative, and upon the Indian assuring them that the man thus described had stolen his venison, they desired to be informed how he was able to give such a minute description of a person whom it appeared he had not seen. The Indian answered thus.—The thief I know is a little man by his having made a pile of stones to stand upon in order to reach the venison from the height I hung it, standing on the ground; that he is an old man, I know by his short steps which I have traced over the dead leaves in the woods; and that he is a white man I know by his turring out his toes when he walks, which an Indian never does. His gun I know to be short, by the mark which the muzzle made by rubbing the bark of the tree against which it had leaned; that his dog is small I know by his tracks; and that he has a bob-tail I discovered by the mark it made in the dust where he was sitting at the time his master was taking down the meat.
