In CHANCERY, June 15, 1807.

William Killy, against John Hamilton Brown, Charles Carroll, and Jennett his wife, Harriet Brookes, George W. Whitaker, and Anne his wife, and Eleanor Brookes, heirs of John Brown.

THE object of the petition in this case is to compel the defendants, the heirs of John Brown, to set forth what real estate descended to him, and where the same is situated, what part has been sold, to whom, and for what sum, and to account for the proceeds of the said sales, and to procure a decree for the sale of the said real estate, or as much remains unsold, or so much as may be necessary for the payment of the debts therein mentioned, for which the personal estate is alleged to be insufficient. It is stated by the petitioner, (being the chancellor of the State and interested in the suit,) to the best of his judgment, that John Hamilton Brown, one of the defendants, who is the eldest son of John Brown, therein mentioned, and would have been his sole heir if the act to direct debts not taken place, has appeared in court to the petitioner, and the appearance of the said John Hamilton Brown to the said petition being entered on the docket, it is thereupon, on the application of the petitioner, ordered by the honourable Jeremiah Townley Chase, chief judge of the third judicial district, that the petitioner cause a copy of this notice to be inserted at least three weeks successively in the Maryland Gazette before the twentieth day of July next, to the end that each of the heirs of the said John Brown, who are defendants in the said petition, have notice of the said petition, and of its substance and object, and may be warned to appear in Chancery court on or before the thirtieth day of September next, in person, or by a solicitor, to shew cause, if any they have, wherefore a decree should pass as prayed.

JEREMIAH TOWNLEY CHASE, chief judge of the third judicial district. True copy. Test. NICHOLAS BREWER, Reg. Cur. Can.

R A G S.

SWEET ladies, pray not be offended, Nor mind the jests of sneering wags; No harm believe me is intended, When humbly I request your Rags. The scraps, which you reject unfit, To clothe the tenant of a hovel, May shine in sentiment and wit, And help to make a charming novel. The cap exalted thoughts will raise, The ruffle in description flourish; Whilst on the glowing work we gaze The thought will love excite and nourish. Each beau in study will engage, His fancy doubtless will be warmer, When writing on the milk white page, Which once, perhaps, adorn'd his charmer: From foreigners, who sneer and vapor, No longer forc'd our books to buy, Our gentle belles will furnish paper, Our fighting beaux will wit supply.

SYLVANUS;

OR,

PLEASURES OF THE LOTTERY!

THY pleasures, Hope, in Campbell's page, With t' best influence reign; The bosom's keener woes assuage, And banish every pain. But why the Lottery omit, Where fancy loves to dwell, And expectation's visions sweet, To happy transport swell? A simple swain, but strong of mind, And wife, though not by title, (Such self form'd wits we of en find, Brought up in Nature's school.) Sylvanus plough'd a little field, Old Epping forest near; 'Twas small, but culture made it yield, Full fifty pounds a year. No farm like this was to be seen, For butter, milk, and cream, The cattle too, and cottage clean, Were all the country's theme. Sylvanus was a saving wight, In two short years he spar'd Full sixteen pounds; now with delight He glow'd, and fortune dar'd. Yet this was all w; he could not rise To wealth in all his life; He bought a ticket, hop'd a prize, And then he'd take a wife. He'd purchase Iquire Debauch's land; The price already fix'd, A splendid mansion he had plann'd— The mortar, even, was mix'd. "Now for the last I'll search," said Syl, "The country and the town;" "No low bred girl, of forward will, " Shall by my side lie down. "From the first ranks I'll make my choice; " A form of fairest mould; "How will my honest heart rejoice— " She cannot be a scold. "And now let Heaven record my vows, " Ill keep no girls nor hounds; " I'll be domestic, love my spouse, " But not beyond all bounds. "The children too, that soon will bless " The pleasures of my bed, "With heartfelt fondness I'll care— " They'll guard my aged head. Amidst these visions, drawing comes— The thirty thousand's up. The twenty, ten, and lesser sums— He still retains a hope. Some hundreds yet were in the wheel— Though not at once enrich'd, To fortune gently he may steal, So was the man bewitch'd. Nor envies he the great man's lot, While humbler joys remain; A larger farm, a snugger cot, An honest wife though plain. Thus Sylvan's spirits never funk— "Heaven still may something send," On the last day 'tis drawn a—blank; His hopes are at an end. His hoard is gone, yet not for nought, Three months of purest bliss— "By heaven," cries Syl, "'twas cheaply boughts "Who'll say I've done amiss?"
